

create documents or spreadsheets from within the app itself, as well as browse through your folders and files. The options on offer when creating spreadsheets or documents are quite basic at best even when compared against the apps from Apple and Microsoft.

On the iPhone and iPad, all three iWork apps are available as separate downloads from the App Store. Even though the apps do feel like they deserve larger real estate than an iPhone's 3.5 or 4-in screen, there's no doubt that these are the best productivity apps for touchscreen devices. The intuitive design of the apps sparkle on the iPad and it's quite amazing how fluidly Keynote and Numbers work. This is also the only mobile app suite (among the three) that lets you create presentations.

Collaboration

Collaboration is pretty much the 'buzz word' for productivity suites and Office 365 obliges. You can invite other users to start working on a document/spreadsheet/presentation with you, by saving the file in SkyDrive and then emailing the link to the other users. The users will then be able to work on the file either in Word (provided they too have Office 2013 installed) or online in the Word Web app (for which they require their own Microsoft ID). While this sounds fine, in practice, we stumbled across multiple connection
