

Thus, the dark side to e-learning is ever present and also includes a lack of recognition and an alarming number of people signing up for courses and an equally alarming number abandoning ship, to name a few downsides.

Over the course of this FastTrack to E-Learning, you'll learn about everything from e-learning's origins to what you need to set up an e-learning course of your own.

However, keep one thing in mind: e-learning isn't very different from any skill or trade. Its effectiveness is only as good as the person engaging in it. If you're not really interested, no amount of courses you sign up for will be of any value add to you. Self-motivation is a must in this domain. Good luck and happy learning. 