

COSPLAY

Cosplay involves the use of a lot of props that are part of the various costumes and attires. When it comes to making the props, one of the go to materials of choice is, you guessed it, cardboard! Here we'll show you some really creative use of cardboard in cosplays as parts of costumes or as props. We'll even link you to the appropriate site so you can try your own hand at making them.

Manish Rajesh | manish@digit.in

HELMETS

There are a lot of cardboard helmet DIYs out there, and for every helmet imaginable. We personally really like this helmet and thought it looked quite epic.

<http://digit.in/hawkhelm>

BECOME THE LEGO

We think the image is quite self-explanatory here. Take your love for Legos to the next level. Become a Lego today!

<http://digit.in/bethelego>

KNIGHT'S ARMOUR

It's comparatively easier to make cosplay for kids, for the obvious reason that it's smaller and easier to handle. But if you want to scale the size up, you can totally do that.

<http://digit.in/knightt>

CARDBOARD CHAINSAW

Here's how you can make a cardboard chainsaw because... errm... you know, the character might need it or... because why not?!

<http://digit.in/vroomvroom>

GUNDAM COSPLAY

This particular cosplay by deviantart user Cliv-elee is nothing short of epic. We can't imagine the work that went into it. But if you're willing to put in the effort, we've got you covered.

<http://digit.in/gundamtut>

CARDBOARD GUNS (THESE DON'T ACTUALLY FIRE ANYTHING)

For those moments when you need a gun to accompany the character you're trying to cosplay or just want a prop gun for the fun of it.

<http://digit.in/cbarmoury>