WHAT'S NEW

Joaquin Phoenix as The Joker?

It's already known that director Todd Phillips is working on an untitled Joker movie exploring the popular character's origins. There has been a lot of speculation on who will play the clown prince of Gotham. For now, Joaquin Phoenix is being reported as Phillips' top choice. According to a report by Variety, Phoenix has apparently accepted the offer. However, Warner Bros. is yet to officially confirm his role in the movie. This doesn't mean that Phoenix is going to replace Jared Leto's Joker from Suicide Squad. Leto will most likely be coming back in Suicide Squad 2 but he won't be involved in the origin movie. The movie will take a deep dive into the events that led the Joker to become a ruthless criminal. We still aren't sure whether we'll get to see the early relationship between him and Harley Quinn. We don't even know whether we'll get to see some Joker and Batman rivalry as well. It's also reportedly said to be based in the 80's and be more of a crime drama rather than a typical superhero movie.

Solo: A Star Wars Story might show Kessel Run

Han Solo has been bragging about the Kessel Run since A New Hope, all the way till The Force Awakens. And we might finally see him complete it in 12 parsecs in the upcoming spin-off movie. There were already rumours flying around when the trailer was revealed. Towards the end, we see the Millennium Falcon flying across a cloudy environment where a huge creature with tentacles is seen. It certainly looked like a situation that warranted jumping into hyperspace to escape. However, these were mere speculations.

That is, until new developments were revealed by LEGO with a new set. Called the Kessel Run Millennium Falcon, the description read, "outsmart the villainous overseers and escape the Kessel Mines aboard the amazing Millennium Falcon!"

This all but confirms that we are indeed going to see the legendary Kessel Run that earned Han his bragging rights.
