FUTURE FEATURE

THE SUN STARTER

Remember when the aliens killed our sun to make a profit?

HIS EYES OPENED WIDE. The sheets, damp with his sweat, were crumpled where he had clutched at them, clinging on for dear life. Remnants of the nightmare flashed before his eyes – the open green fields, the warmth of the sun and that one horrible moment. He did not say farewell knowing he would see it again soon.

As he got out of bed to make a cup of coffee or what passed for coffee now, the clock on the mantelpiece winked 4:06 AM, February 1, 2043. It was a chilly night, as all the nights were now. There were no seasons or global warming to worry about.

Thetatron looked out of the window at the dark sky. He saw his grim reflection, a look that didn't suit his boyish handsomeness. 'At least the rest of me is not yet gone to seed' he thought admiring his lean, muscular body – the kind of muscles you get when working in the fields and toiling in the sun. Ahh, the sun. The warm, circle of light always shining down, ever taken for granted until that fateful day.

That day, February 1, 2038, had begun like any other. The-tatron met his childhood friends, Xenapsilon and Omi-cron at the 24 hour resto. The nostalgia hit him hard as he was served a plate of chicken steak burger. One pill for each. Scientists had finally cracked the nutrition code on an atomic level and were mashing up all the proteins, carbs, sugar, fats the body needed in one single pill. The turning point came when they could be flavoured to your every mood and desire. The slice of chocolate cake was no longer a diet cheater, it was the diet.

Xena, of course, loved the pill. She was a part of the team that cracked the code. The golden brown curls pulled back in a ponytail, framing a cherubic face half hidden behind horn rimmed glasses. Despite her double PhD's in bioengineering and biological DNA sequencing, she had the gift to put anybody at ease. Theta always envied and loved this about her. He caught Omi eyeing him surreptitiously. Poor guy thought Theta, fervently hoping that Omi's crush on him wouldn't break their friendship.

The trio sat there reminiscing about the good old days when they didn't have to care about mortgage payments and could just sit back and enjoy their lives. But the ruckus was making it difficult to hear each other over the small table.
