

digit diary

If you are ever curious about what the Digit gang is up to, this is the place to get all the inside info. From the latest game we're obsessing about to the newest intern we're driving up the wall – it's all here folks.

The intern that survived... (thus far)

Since none of you know me, I should introduce myself. My name's Dhriti, and I'm the new girl here at Digit. Actually, I think I'm the only girl in the Mumbai office! My senses were tingling with expectation when I walked into the office, but they were sent into overdrive as I walked into the Digit loft – a noisy place filled with guys swearing at each other and making pretty blatantly sexist comments, which bordered on lewd (not at me, just in general)... but then again, they're also a bunch of guys who know their s*#@.

Almost immediately I felt at home here, and "The intern", is what I was dubbed by Mithun – the name stuck. "The intern and I are here", says Mithun everyday to a disgruntled Robert, who wants to know, "Where the f%$# is everyone?" If he wasn't my boss, I'd yell out, "I HAVE A NAME, MITHUN!". Anyway, since Robert's given me a free pass to spill the beans about my month at Digit, sparing no one, strap in for a wild ride!

Barely a few days into the busiest work month of the year for Digit, Arnab 'conveniently' went on leave for ten whole days! He spent those 10 days enjoying the weather and scenery in Leh, while we poor souls were left to sweat it out in Mumbai – non-stop gaming is really tiring!

Manish even took part in the Semi-Pro... and won! Wait. No. Almost. Not quite. Mithun has been kind enough to remind him of his defeat every chance he gets. Classic Mithun. Manish does have a badass collection of rock songs though, and I promptly stole a few for my playlist.

Abhijit, on the other hand, is a complete klutz who sends weird, baseless and random sentences flying out from nowhere. He, Arnab and Souvik are my Bengali brethren, so <333. Speaking of Souvik, well... I've barely seen him this whole month, but when he does show up he's either being probed and prodded by Mithun about his (imminent) 'cancer', or singing off-key, and very loudly, along with Manish, Mithun and Abhijit.

Despite being one myself, Mithun has somehow managed to make me dislike Bengalis. So effective is his brainwashing that I violently denied having any Bengali relatives in Mumbai (even though I obviously do).

Aditya is the quiet one. During occasional cancer breaks, I often want to shake him and ask him to say something. Anything. He's just shy, I guess, but he did share his Sprite with me, so I like him.

These guys are seriously into technology, often at the expense of everything else. During one of the daily video calls with Robert, in which he's invariably shrieking at all of us, I tried to drink some water, and ended up choking, and thus, water went flying everywhere! Robert totally freaked out and sat up straight in his comfy looking chair in Australia, looking very concerned. "Aww", "I thought, "he must think I'm dying or something!". "DID YOU GET ANY OF THAT ON THE PC?" he demanded! Ouch! Way to remind me where I am on the pecking order!

As I write this, Mithun and Abhijit are frantic with their preparations for Computex 2018. They're both set to fly off to Taiwan, and are going to enjoy 5-star meals while we sit here chewing on our stale 'chapati-sabzi' dabbas. Life is so unfair!

Arnab just got back from his vacation, and it's bad enough he was enjoying himself all this time, but now he's chattering non-stop about how great his holiday was! If he keeps it up, people are going to be spitting in his chai!

Baiju is my favourite. He is always smiling and polite, unlike the rest of these savages. (Okay, they're all my favourites). Huh, nothing to see there, it's just a printing error. Move along!

With crazy deadlines looming, it was amazing how dedicated these guys are! To gaming I mean, because despite all of Robert's threats of violence, they still always find time to play a game, or thirty. It's not just the gaming... even the work is fun! Heck it's so much fun that I don't want to go home, but the sexist pigs kick me out at 8:30 PM everyday, citing our Indian laws. eyeroll.

I'm called the intern who survived, which makes me a little nervous, because I wonder where the bodies of the others are buried... Apparently I didn't face as much flak as the rest of the interns, and I'd like to believe it's not just because I'm a girl and they're afraid they'd break me (as if!). I prefer to think it's because I'm just as crazy about tech as they are, and they can see it.

So how much have I enjoyed my experience here? Let's just say I hate Mumbai with a passion (it's a requirement for us Pune-ites). I absolutely freakin' detest it! But if given the chance to move here and work at this place after my studies, I'd jump at it. Team Digit, you can make even stinky and filthy Mumbai feel like home! 