Teardown: Huawei P20 Pro

Three is better than two.

No Gorilla Glass protection

The 6.1-inch FHD display doesn't advertise Corning Gorilla Glass protection. Although it isn't weak, it's best to use protective cases or covers and also avoiding to store keys in the same pocket as the phone.

The notch life

With no hardware for Face ID or any similar technology, the notch on the P20 Pro is smaller compared to the iPhone X. The proximity and brightness sensor are placed below the display, between the earpiece and camera. The OS includes a feature to hide the notch by adding a black bar on the top to match the thickness of the notch.

New camera king
