The Coolest Smartphone Accessories

There are a lot of options, now, for smartphone accessories, beyond selfie sticks and bluetooth speakers. You do not need a Moto Z to use these smartphone mods. The March 2018 issue of Digit has details on how to make your own smartphone stand, as well as a projector.

FLEXIBLE MINI TRIPOD

This is a must have accessory now, considering the various low light modes available through apps. You can screw a selfie stick onto a camera. Look for flexible mini tripods, which are pretty versatile. If you make a lot of videos, it would make sense to invest in a gimbal to reduce shakes and optimise the quality of your videos.

WATERPROOF POUCH

With the monsoons right around the corner, a waterproof smartphone pouch is a sensible investment. This works better than a waterproof case, as it is much cheaper, and you do not have to worry about the model of the smartphone. If you're not one to care about a little added bulkiness and want to protect your phone, this is a good option.

MACRO LENS

You get a number of commercial lens kits, but none of the ones available in India are very good. The only ones that are any good are the macro lenses, but you can get this done with a bit of jugaad. Just use the lens of a DVD player or a laser pointer, attached to the phone with card and tape. If these are not available, even a drop of water on the lens will do the trick.

FAN

This is a fun little gadget that will literally keep you cool. They are really inexpensive as well, and should be available for less than 200 bucks. The only thing to watch out for is to make sure that the type of USB plug used is compatible with your smartphone.

KEYBOARD

Let's face it, if you really want to be productive when typing, a smartphone keyboard will help you increase your typing speeds by leaps and bounds. If you are looking for something fancy and futuristic, then there are laser projection keyboards available as well.
