

ALT this month:

Follow a Cyborg from Chittagong to Mandalay and then find out the implants being developed for the human machine. We also examine some cool PC components from the TUF Alliance, followed by the usual reviews of movies and TV shows.

World's tiniest computer

The world's tiniest computer can make a grain of rice look huge. The University of Michigan answered IBM's "world's smallest computer" boast with a temperature sensing 'computer' measuring just 0.04 cubic millimeters.

<https://dgit.in/wsc>

WHAT'S NEW

Fortnite Rehab

A nine-year old girl who was supposedly addicted to 'Fortnite' has been checked into rehab. The girl got hooked to the game, playing for over 10 hours a day. It was reported that she would lash out at her father if he tried to take the console away from her.

There's no denying the popularity of Fortnite. The game has taken the world by storm and is breaking all kinds of records left right and centre with millions of downloads since its launch last year and endorsements from several famous celebrities.

According to the parents, she is currently in therapy for addiction, as she had become withdrawn, agitated and disturbed from playing the game for long periods of time. Definitely not good news and most definitely not in favour of gaming in general as the WHO recently classified 'gaming disorder' as a disease.

<https://dgit.in/fnadic>

The health benefits of ASMR

A new study suggests that Autonomous Sensory Meridian Response (ASMR) that experienced by some people in response to specific 'triggers', such as the sound of whispering, tapping, scratching and/or slow hand movements, among others, could have both mental and physical health benefits.

This study is the first of its kind, while ASMR has been around for a while, very little research has actually been done on its benefits.

There are over 13 million ASMR videos on YouTube, from haircuts and massages, to mock medical examinations.

People watch these videos to relax, or sleep better, or just relieve stress. Not everyone experience the response and the associated feelings though.

Dr Giulia Poerio, of the University of Sheffield's Department of Psychology said that many people experience ASMR, but awareness of the sensation has risen dramatically over the last decade, thanks to sites like YouTube.

<https://dgit.in/ASMR>

Octantis, the Octopus City

Biologists have discovered an underwater Octopus city, and they've aptly named it Octantis. The city features dens made out of piles of sand and shells, and is home to around 15 cephalopods, which suggests that the creatures aren't as isolatory as we initially thought.

<https://dgit.in/octantis>

Play as Obama in Shaq-Fu

Shaq-Fu: A Legend Reborn sees the return of Shaquille O'Neal to virtual martial arts. The game's first DLC pack, called BarackFu, adds an additional story starring none other than the former POTUS, Barack Obama. The character is called "Dirty Barry" in the game.

<https://dgit.in/dirtybarry>

Hawking's voice beamed to a black hole

While Stephen Hawking's ashes were interred at Westminster Abbey in London, the European Space Agency beamed a musical tribute, in Hawking's famous synthesized voice, towards the closest-known black hole.

<https://dgit.in/haho>