Comcast backs out

The race to acquire 21st Century Fox raged on as Disney raised the offer to $71.3 billion from the previous $52 billion bid, countering Comcast's bid of $65 billion. And now, it looks like Comcast no longer wants to pursue entertainment properties but is still chasing Sky properties. <https://dgit.in/Cmc-stDsnv>

WHAT'S NEW

San Diego Comic Con 2018 highlights

It's that time of the year again, for the world's biggest pop culture convention. All the biggest entertainment studios and publishers got together to present fans with all the upcoming goodness in the form of comic books, movies and TV shows. It would be practically impossible to include all the announcements, so here's our pick of the most important ones.

Starting off with the biggest ones, DC clearly made the most headlines. They released trailers for Aquaman and Shazam while showing some footage from the Wonder Woman sequel. The visual effects look impressive in the trailer and since director James Wan has said that two-thirds of the movie will be underwater. Shazam sees a young Billy Batson being given the power of the Gods and his discovery of how to use them. It looks like a fun movie, the kind of shift in tone needed in DC movies. Coming to their DC Universe streaming platform, we got a first look at the new live-action Titans TV show. New comics were also announced for Aquaman, Batman, Wonder Woman, Shazam, and a Green Lantern reboot by writer Grant Morrison.

After being cancelled, Star Wars: Clone Wars is being revived again. All we know is it continues from where it left off and it will be streamed exclusively on Disney's streaming service. We also got a new trailer for Fantastic Beasts: Crimes of Grindelwald. This time we get to see more of Newt's journey along with Dumbledore and Nicholas Flamel making an appearance. We also got the first trailer for Godzilla: King of the Monsters where we not only got to see Godzilla but also Mothra, King Ghidorah and Rodan.

Sony Pictures went on to show separate footage from Spider-man: Into the Spider-Verse and Venom. It has been confirmed that Spiderman won't be doing any cameo in the Venom movie. The footage also showed Venom biting off someone's head and fighting against another symbiote named Riot.

Marvel Studios were absent this year, so there wasn't anything new about Captain Marvel or Avengers 4 or the future of the MCU in general.
