

Hippocratic oath for computing

The Association for Computing Machinery has formulated a new code of ethics for computing professionals. <https://digit.in/sep18-52-1>

Growing Crops on Mars

Before growing crops on Mars, humans will have to use synthetic biology to tweak them for Martian conditions. <https://digit.in/sep18-52-2>

Teardown: The Geek Brain

Don't let this trigger the neurons in your amygdala

Aditya Madanapalle | aditya@digit.in

Memelord

Irony T-shirts, pop culture references, fascination with violent webcomics, and a deep loathing for The Big Bang Theory.

Muscle Memory

Currently busy in unlearning the location of the fire button in PUBG mobile after using a DIY 3D printed trigger.

Sound of Music

In the search for pure audio and clear quality, the sound is more important than the music. Are your cables oxygen free?

Overstimulation

Flashing GIFs and dubstep are nothing compared to audio interpretations and colour visualisations of sorting algorithms

Eldritch Abomination

This is the part of the brain that is responsible for emotions/obstacles, and hence must wait... dreaming.

$\pi = 3 = e$

The WIP proof involves figuring out the improbable sequence of 6 consecutive nines, and how the pyramids were built.

Endless arguments

Is Stannis the best military strategist in ASOIAF? Did the top stop spinning in the last scene? Can the Necrons take on the Tyrannids?

1337sp33k

Knows the exact tone, inflection and pauses necessary to get the desired results from intelligent voice assistants.

2x Polyglot

The resume lists languages only computers can understand, and has a low tolerance for anything syntactically ambiguous

Twitch Reactions

Jumping in the air then tracking an opponent with continuous machine gun fire and then finishing him off with a railgun headshot? No problem.

VR Ready

Unlike normies, the geek experiences headaches and symptoms of motion sickness once the head mounted display comes off