

digit diary

If you are ever curious about what the Digit gang is up to, this is the place to get all the inside info. From the latest game we're obsessing about to the newest intern we're driving up the wall – it's all here folks.

Earlier this month on a quaint wednesday afternoon, in the compound that houses the Digit office, the sea of tranquility was disturbed by what appeared to be a blazing and rhythmic siren. The guards manning the grounds, suddenly alert by the approaching noise rose to their feet. It took a while but they didn't see an ambulance or a firetruck but the noise grew louder. It peaked as the source of the alarming sound turned the corner and a wave of confusion spread across the faces of the guards. Confusion did I say? More like WTF! If you'd been in their shoes, you'd have felt the same because it was Mithun who came around the corner, riding what appeared to be a electric bicycle blazing at a break-neck speed. And the siren? That was Mithun yelling, "HATH JAO, HATH JAO, HATH JAO", to warn folks who were in the way. Manish was right behind him on another bicycle with Abhijit in tow on foot. So what were the guys at Digit doing riding bicycles at insane speeds in the middle of the afternoon? Reviewing them. Yeah, that's how this entire month turned out to be.

You see, this entire issue is all about going crazy and finding the most outrageous things from the world of technology, science and everything of interest in the geek-o-sphere. So instead of having our usual gadget comparison, we decided to call for two top-of-the-line bicycles and compared them against each other. The bicycles were only the beginning. The research that we had to do for all the wacky articles in this issue had the entire team weirded up. Every few hours, one of the guys would either go 'WTF', 'Yeh kyaa hai?'; 'Why would someone do this?' or the quintessential 'Whaaaaat!'

We are certain that all the ridiculous stuff we were poring over had a permanent psychological effect on the guys. Manish went off to Hyderabad on vacation, so with one less guy around everyone's workload went sky high. Aditya, was particularly affected. He would start having random conversations with himself every now and then. Later, the guys learnt that his Warframe clan have recently become active on Teamspeak again, and that was the reason behind most of his sudden off-topic conversations.

The other guy who nearly lost it this month was Mithun. The DIY was exceptionally frustrating because the circuit was simple and it wouldn't light up at all. It took him three hours to build the first coil and by the time he redid it for the nth time, he'd gotten enough practice that he could make coils three times larger in under 15 minutes. It wasn't just the coil that he had to remake. You could see him tweaking the circuit with one hand while holding a CFL tube in the other. There's no counting the number of components he switched out or tweaked values to get the CFL tube to light up. You might be wondering, if the CFL was faulty the whole time? Nope, it was the damn transistor.

There were a few high points. The month started with a bounty of comic books arriving at our doorsteps. These weren't your usual run of the mill DC or Marvel comics but proper Indian comics such as Aghori, Ravanaayan, Durga and Angry Maushi. Some of these comics are really good and it's a crime that they slipped under our radar.

QUOTE OF THE MONTH

Hath Jao, Hath Jao, Hath Jao!

—Mithun

Adieu Mr. Das

Souvik, our resident auto-guy has left us and joined a business magazine. Outrageous! There's one less Bong in the office which has left Arnab a teensy bit sad. The others were gloomy because there wouldn't be any fancy cars coming to the office anymore.

Brrrrrrrrrrrr

Aditya's been going nuts over a massager backpack that came in. He's been wearing it while sitting in his seat, when's he's out in the balcony to get some fresh air, when he's in the ... well, you get the picture.

Co-op Monster Hunter

Manish has been pretty excited about Monster Hunter: World coming to PC. He managed to get two keys so that he could play with one of the guys. Mithun was the only one who volunteered but he was so slow that Manish had to wait forever till Mithun could finally join the multiplayer fray.