WHAT'S NEW

Leaked photos from Joker

Todd Phillips' Joker picked up quite some pace with the casting while people waited for a first look of the characters. The movie is going to explore the origin of the Clown Prince of Gotham, showing his life before he turned into the Joker. With Joaquin Phoenix cast to don the main role, fans are quite excited. Recently, photos as well as a video leaked out from the sets that showed Joaquin and another actor talking on the street. Looking at how Joaquin passes off creepy expressions, especially that smile, even without Joker's makeup, we are definitely excited to see more from the movie. Another set of leaks gave us a glimpse of Phoenix in a scene based at a subway station, in what looks like a Joker attire before his final transformation. Following the leaks, director Todd Phillips himself posted the first look of the actor with Joker's name revealed to be Arthur Fleck. Joker is expected to release on 8 October, 2019.

Marvel Studios releases Captain Marvel trailer

After Entertainment Weekly revealed exclusive photos from Captain Marvel, it was imminent that a trailer was soon going to drop. The photos gave us a glimpse of how Brie Larson's costume was going to look like. It also showed the Skrulls for the first time, bringing back Ronan The Accuser from the first Guardians movie. Marvel pushed the trailer after a week and we got to see more of Carol Danvers suiting up to become

Captain Marvel. We get to see more of the Skrulls and Spaceforce with Jude Law playing Mar-Vell's character. Marvel Studios President Kevin Feige had already revealed that the movie was going to be based in the 90s. The trailer also shows a young Nick Fury with both his eyes intact and there's Agent Phil Coulson as well. We already know that Captain Marvel is going to be the strongest character in the MCU, who is capable of bringing down Moons. It will be interesting to witness exactly how powerful she is and how her powers work out in the movie. Captain Marvel comes to theaters on 8 March, 2019.
