

Slowdown on full-self driving

Tesla has stopped promoting the 'Full-Self driving option' since they haven't been able to perfect the feature as of yet. <https://digit.in/nov18-12-1>

Rounder corners through software

Google is using software to make the Pixel 3's screen corners look more rounder. <https://digit.in/nov18-12-2>

although India Post is reliable and the only option for some remote areas of India, it is slow.

Most big title games are downloaded on the day they're released, and there isn't too much advantage of putting it in a DVD that reaches you 20 days after it is made – there are probably already updates for big titles out already by then. We use the DVD as more of a discovery tool, to help you experience things you wouldn't have if you were left to surf by yourself. It's why we support and promote indie developers so much.

Game walkthroughs are a good idea, we should do some for our YouTube channel. Let's see if we can make them funny as well. We're not PewDiePie, but we can elicit a giggle now and then...

decision for product purchase and the Digit team (especially that overrated Agent001) has chose to ignore my wish.

Earlier I wanted to buy a good Bluetooth headphones and mailed him two to three times. I waited and waited and still waiting. Now I wish to purchase a laptop this Diwali and I have mailed him on 9th October and as of yet, nothing.

I am severely disappointed and frustrated. How in the world do you guys plan on helping out your geek fan base without replying, telepathically??

I am sending this mail to both help@digit.in and editor@digit.in. I can't afford to make a blind decision on something big as a laptop, considering its price. Do not let me down, Digit.

have only been receiving emails sent to agent001@thinkdigit.com (which is the ID I still use to send replies from). I think my colleague Mithun is already in touch with you for your query, but I want to post an official apology for not noticing sooner that the mail filters were broken. I am so sorry for missing out on emails from you and the many thousands of readers who would have written to me during the past 3 months or so. I promise to be more vigilant from here on.

–Agent 001

 I have been trying to contact agent001 for 4 months and I haven't got a single reply from him or any Digit member. I have been mailing to agent001@digit.in for some product advice. I wish to make an informed

 My apologies Abhishek, but I never received your email. Not your fault, we had an internal auto-forwarding rule setup that broke for some strange reason. Turns out I haven't been receiving emails sent to agent001@digit.in and

 Dear Digit,
My name is Nilakantha Mahalik. My age is about 12 years of age. I had been a reader for about 2 years, from 2016. I am a great fan of Digit. Having seen a good process of evolution, starting from the humble beginning to the awesome feature of the latest magazine. You are a great provider of technological news. I really love the writing of sir Robert and I really appreciate the hard work of members of team Digit (especially Manish, Arnab,

Letter of the Month

Hi, Robert!

A week back, I caught up with some of my high school friends. We spoke for hours about everything under the sun and someone mentioned that I used to have video game posters in my room. My brother was quick to point out that I'd gotten them along with issues of Digit. It was enough to invoke the nostalgia of my school days and made me wonder why I'd stopped buying the magazine. I decided to get a copy and check out how it looked today.

The first thing that shocked me was the DVD - I cannot comment on its quality or usefulness because I don't have a DVD drive in my computer. My laptop too does not have a DVD drive, I've taken it out to make room for the SSD. I think you are behind the times with the use of DVD. Digit needs a medium more today than that - and I'm sure it burns a hole in your pocket too.

Coming to the presentation, I simply loved it! It brought back memories and so nothing else mattered. I revisited certain tech jargon that I'd long forgotten. 'HEDT' being one of those. I Googled it after reading the review of the AMD Threadripper, and realized I have a HEDT right now. I had a barely sufficient Core 2 Duo PC when I used to buy the magazine. Now I have an HEDT, and I'm more than excited to take a yearly subscription of Digit (without the DVD and the Fastrack, both of which, in my opinion, belong on the web).

All said, I'm looking forward to a year of the magazine. Keep up the good work!

P.S: I found a couple of errors - the first of which was in the Editor's section - the very first page! - where there was a typo ('visit's'). There was a spacing issue in one of the snippets in the top of a page somewhere. I hope you iron out these in upcoming issues.

Thanks for the feedback Gowtham. Pardon me while I hang my head in shame for a few hours...

Welcome back as a subscriber. Hope you have more feedback for us, and more often, and hopefully we give you even fewer chances to point out typos... As for the DVD, what can we say, we want to end it once and for all, but still get a lot of hate-mail for making it 1 DVD from 2 DVDs. :-(
