the SP700N coming from Uptown Funk by Bruno Mars. However you experience a great deal of masking. Vocals are difficult to distinguish amid the rumbling bass. There's no LDAC and no aptX HD support with the SP700N either. Another problem? They switch to mono when making calls, which is unexpected and unheard of.

Verdict: The Sony SP700N is perhaps the best in this lot for bassheads – and that's all it has going for it. The noise cancellation is fairly average and not enough to drown out the sound in a flight or situations with similar noise levels. The numerous issues with the build does not help either. While Sony has marketed these as sports earbuds, the IPX4 rating makes them unfriendly with anything more than a few splashes of water. That being said, if the bass and a secure fit are your things, the SP700N could be an option – one we'd still ask you to skip on and wait for the next iteration.
