WITH THE LAUNCH OF SPOTIFY AND YOUTUBE MUSIC, music lovers have more options to choose from. In this article, we'll be going through those interesting tips and some lesser known features packed into YouTube Music.

ENABLE STATS FOR NERDS

If you have spent a lot of time on YouTube, you must have come across the 'Stats for nerds' feature. Enabling it gives you details about the currently playing video. To do so, head over to the Settings menu in the app and then tap on Advanced to turn on stats for nerds. Now, whenever you play a video or song, an overlay will appear in the album art area or video with all the details. It lists down several parameters out of which the ones you should focus on are Video format, Audio format, Bandwidth and Dropped frames. The Video format tells you the format, resolution and frame rate of the video being streamed. Under Audio format, you get to know the format of the audio file being streamed. Bandwidth will give you an idea about the bandwidth of your connection to the YouTube server while fetching the song or video. Here you can determine whether your network data or Wi-Fi connection is being a problem.

MANAGE WATCH HISTORY

To view your watch history, go to Settings > Privacy & location > Manage watch history. Here, all the videos you watched will be listed. However, the only problem is that it lists down every video you've watched on YouTube and not just using YouTube Music. They've implemented date filters and a search bar in this menu to make it easier to search for what you're looking for. You can individually delete the videos from your history or delete them in groups. You can disable the feature by going to the previous menu and turning on 'Pause watch history'.

HIDE ALL YOUR CONTENT

You might have hundreds of subscriptions on your YouTube account that can be viewed by anyone following you. Other content like your public playlists and liked videos are also viewable by anyone. If you wish to keep these details private, then you can change your privacy settings accordingly. Go to Settings > Privacy & Location > Manage account privacy. In this section, you will come across three checkboxes dedicated to different items including Liked videos, Saved playlists and subscriptions. Uncheck the ones you want to keep private.

AUTOMATICALLY DOWNLOAD MIXTAPE

During the days of using YouTube solely as a music streaming service through videos, it would generate a mixtape playlist that would play videos as per your habits. This mixtape has been brought to YouTube Music as well. Although something similar is present on other services, YT lets you selectively download up to 100 songs from the generated mixtape. Your Offline Mixtape can be accessed from the Downloads tab. The slider lets you select the number of songs you want the app to download that also shows you the amount of storage space it will require. After you tap on Turn On, it will immediately start downloading the songs. Initially, most of the songs that appear will be the ones you usually listen to and slowly, it will start serving new recommendations.

SEARCH MUSIC BY LYRICS

There must have been times when you recall a certain part or lyrics of a song but can't remember its name. Other music streaming services allow you to search for songs only if your keywords match the title of the song or the album. YouTube Music can throw you song search results using only the lyrics. You don't even need to enable any setting.

Simply tap on the Search tab to type down a single line of lyrics from any song and get the correct song in the results. This feature is going to be extremely useful for the times when someone randomly hums a tune and you remember some obscure part of the lyrics. 🔍
