DIRK GENTLY'S HOLISTIC DETECTIVE AGENCY

This show is (loosely) based on the Douglas Adams novel of the same name. Dirk Gently, runs a detective agency that works on the premise that everything in the universe is connected to everything else. This means that you can analyse a piece of cake with enough detail to solve a murder case, and the same cake also actually has the solution to any case anywhere in the universe. In practice, Gently is just psychic. There is time travelling and soul swapping involved, so things go absolutely haywire. Elijah Wood is the sidekick to the detective, and is a grey character. Those who like Doctor Who will enjoy this show.

SALVATION

A bright student at MIT discovers that a meteor is on a collision path towards Earth. What follows is the story of how various people and organisations tackle the problem. The plan is to use a Gravity Tractor, this is a vehicle that flies parallel to the potential impactor, and tries to bend it way from its path. As against other approaches such as just smashing the asteroid to bits, this method is painstaking and slow. Complicating all these attempts to save the world is that the US Government insists that all knowledge of the asteroid be kept secret from the general public.

The 100 has stunning CGI of a gigantic space station known as "The Ark" where most of humanity lives, the survivors of a nuclear apocalypse that made the Earth inhospitable to human life. The story spanning four seasons begins with a group of 100 prisoners dispatched to the Earth to check if the planet is suitable for human habitation. Vegetation has taken over much of the ruins of human civilisation. The 100 find a number of surprises on the ground, including mutated animals. Those who liked the initial seasons of Lost will like this show as well. There are five seasons of the show, with each changing up the stakes and the world quite a bit.

This is a series set in a dystopian future, where most of the world lives in abject poverty. The episodes follow a group of people given a chance to go live in a techno-futuristic utopia. To do this, they have to pass a series of tests aimed at identifying only the best possible candidates. Each episode has something new to offer, and there are plenty of unexpected surprises. The narrative structure of the show is irregular as well, and this is not a linear series. The world keeps evolving drastically over the course of the series. Those who liked Exam or 12 Monkeys will really like this series. The series is originally in Portuguese and has been dubbed in English.

CONTINUUM

Continuum also has a cyberpunk aesthetic, and is set in a future where the world is governed by a corporate oligarchy. Most people have accepted reduced freedoms of assembly and speech, and are willingly part of the corporate dictatorship. A group of terrorists, known as Liber8 execute an attack and are sentenced to death. When they are about to be executed, the group uses a time travel device to go back in time and "fix" the world. A police officer also travels back in time with them. The rest of the story follows her actions as she tries to stop the terrorists. She has a cool suit that can make her invisible, protect her from bullets, tases people, and hacks tech.
