

18 TABLETOP GAMES THAT YOU CANNOT STOP PLAYING ONCE YOU START

01 7 WONDERS

This is a strategy game for up to 7 players, with each game lasting about 30 minutes. Every player is given a game board representing one of the cities that had the seven wonders of the ancient world. Players get seven cards, they choose one of these to play, and pass the rest to the next player. In this way, players can anticipate others' moves down the line. This is one of the highest rated board games of modern times.

02 ANOMIA

This is an incredibly fun game for 3-6 players that keeps you on your toes. Anomia means forgetting the name of an everyday object, and all you have to do is come up with the name of an everyday object of a particular category. You have to do this when you get a pattern match with another player on the table, and then pick up the opponent's card if you say the word before them. The fun part is during the cascades, when a number of matches show up in rapid succession.

03 AZUL

Azul is a deep strategy game for 2-4 players, perhaps, the most beautiful game on the list. While the setup is simple, and the game lasts between 20 to 40 minutes, there is a lot of thought that is required for every action. The idea is to basically move tiles from a factory floor, to

You will find just about the best tabletop gaming has to offer here, without burning a hole in your pocket. Most of these games have been tried and tested by Team Digit as well.

Aditya Madanapalle | aditya@digit.in pattern lines, to a wall that you have to build. The strategy is in getting as many tiles as possible, while blocking the moves for everyone else.

04 CAMEL UP

Camel Up can be played by up to 8 players, and each game lasts less than 30 minutes. Players have to be on camels that are racing around a track, and decide which camel is the winner or loser. The race is divided into legs, and players can betting on these too. There is a big pyramid that releases rolls and releases one die at a time, deciding by how much a camel moves. Funnily, camels can stack on top of each other.

05 CARCASSONNE

This is a game for 2-5 players. In each turn, every player has to build up a French landscape by placing tiles and optionally placing meeples, small figurines representing your men. The tiles are placed to make walls, roads and monasteries, which can be claimed by your meeple points. At every turn, players have to choose between consolidating their positions, or blocking others' moves.

06 CODENAMES

The game involves two teams, so any number of people can play, and also leave and join at any time, with each game lasting between half an hour to an hour. The whole game revolves around connecting a number of words on the table by using a single word that is common or linked to all of them. You have to make sure your team guesses your words only, and not the words of the opposing team, or the assassin card which results in an instant death.

07 DIXIT

Dixit is like a board game version of Psych! There can be 3-6 players. On each turn, the main player describes a card to all the other players, who then provide a card that best matches the description. Now all players must guess the original card. If someone provides a card that matches the description better than the original, that person scores the most points.