DOS

Dos is a sequel to Uno.

However it is a very different game even though gameplay mechanics are similar. You can discard cards that add up to a particular value, and are not allowed to match a card by colour alone - discarded cards must be matched by numbers. Like Uno, Dos has the potential for "house rules", as no one really counts the points.

EXPLODING KITTENS

This is an outrageously fun title. Exploding Kittens is the most backed project in Kickstarter history. The game plays like Russian Roulette, only with a bunch of hilarious cats. The good thing about Exploding Kittens is that you can just throw in another pack if there are more players. There are also a number of expansion packs available.

HIGH SOCIETY

High Society is a card auction game for 2-5 players, and has stunning artworks. The objective of the game is to spend your money in buying prestige cards, while avoiding some cards that reduce your prestige. You have to make sure that you have some amount of money on hand, as you lose the game if you have a lot of prestige, and no money.

11

KING OF TOKYO

This game is for 2-6 players, and lasts for about thirty minutes. It allows players to unleash the Kaiju within them. You play as giant monsters that are rampaging through Tokyo. Your monster acquires special super powers such as shrink rays and tentacles, or perform special actions such as an atmospheric dive bomb. You also have to continuously make sure that no other monster gets more powerful than you.

12

MONOPOLY DEAL

Monopoly Deal is a card game version of Monopoly. The rounds are typically shorter, and players do not get eliminated. Any number of people can play, as you can simply add another deck if there are more than 4 players. The rules are a little complicated, but once everyone understands them, it is difficult to say no to "just one more round". There is also an India version with local cities and currencies.

ONE NIGHT ULTIMATE WEREWOLF

This is essentially Killer or Mafia packaged as a party game. Ultimate Werewolf actually allows a staggering 75 people to play, so everyone in a typical house party can be accommodated. Players get roles from a typical fantasy medieval village - such as the troublemaker, the robber, and so on. The villagers have to work together to kill the werewolves, by performing actions associated with their roles.

16

TABOO

This is a game that can have two teams of any number of people. There are a bunch of cards with an item that you must describe, while not using words on the list. You need to go through as many cards as possible within a time limit. This can get incredibly competitive. The game rewards the players that can think on their feet.

RISK

Risk looks and feels like a serious strategy game. You have tiny pieces for soldiers, artillery and cavalry, and you have to maneuver them across a world map to take over territories. The gameplay takes place over a series of engagements, where the roll of dice decides the outcome of a particular battle.

15

SETTLERS OF CATAN

This game has more than five versions, and while the base game is for 2-4 players, there is an expansion pack that includes two additional players. Players have to fight it out against others to build their colonies on the imaginary island of Catan. Building the towns and played with exactly 4 players. The objective is simple, you have to place cards on the table in ascending order, without talking at all. While playing the game all the players enter a zen like state of cooperation and coordination, which is called "The Mind".

THE RESISTANCE

The Resistance is a game for 5-10 players, and is an advanced version of Mafia. Over a series of rounds, a group of rebels have to eliminate the agents. The whole fun is in the group selection stage, where the players have to form teams to execute certain missions. If the missions are successful, the government falls, unless the agents manage to sabotage the efforts of the rebels.
