

18 APPS KIDS USE WHICH YOU'VE PROBABLY NEVER HEARD OF

Here at Digit, we attempt to keep up with the times. That includes being up-to-date with technology, memes, social media, games, pop culture and everything else you kids do these days. However, some of these uncommon apps, that Gen Z swears by, took us by surprise since we had never even heard of a few of them. Curious? Let's get on with the list.

01

DUNZO

Dunzo is a nifty little on-demand, delivery service app available in multiple cities like Bengaluru, Gurgaon, Delhi, Pune, Hyderabad, Noida and Chennai. It allows young (maybe.. lazy?) users to avail the services of pick up and delivery anywhere in these cities. Some unruly users have even used this service to anonymously deliver a potato to their friend. However, it can be very useful since it can deliver a wide variety of things to you like your daily lunch from home, groceries, pet food, food delivery from restaurants, laundry, books, electronic items and more. You can even use this service to dispatch delivery executives to bring you the charger that you forgot at home. Dunzo claims that it is the quickest way to deliver and receive items in the city and the task will be completed within 60 minutes at most. There's no minimum value for delivery, so even if you just want a packet of Lays, they will Make way for Generation Z! We list out 18 weird, uncommon apps this avant-garde generation uses regularly that most of us from the older generation haven't ever heard of.

Dhriti Datta | dhriti@digit.in do it (at a slightly higher cost). But hey, when the hunger pangs hit, you gotta do what you gotta do, amirite?

Platforms: Android and iOS

02

LAYOUT FROM INSTAGRAM

Layout from Instagram is a collage-maker app that allows you to stitch up to nine pictures together in different layout styles. Instagram limits you to only one picture per grid or several pictures lined consecutively in separate grids in one single post. However, sometimes you might just want to combine a few similar-looking selfies, portrait or landscape shots to tell a story, or simply because you cannot choose just one picture to display in the grid. The app lets you tweak a host of things for each photo, including the size, border width or zoom. The app hosts three handy buttons at the bottom of the screen to replace a selected image, mirror an image or flip it upside-down. The final products look neat and elegant and can be enhanced by using Instagram's in-app filters and image adjusters.

Platforms: Android and iOS

03

LITSY

Litsy is a book tracker app for passionate readers.

Yes, Gen Z does read! The app's interface mimics other social media sites complete with a feed filled with posts, called "reading moments" by fellow readers about their latest or favourite reads. You can share your own reading moments as well about books and what you think about them. However, the main premise of the app is being a book tracker. Litsy allows you to search for books or authors and then add them to your collection of 'Reading', 'To Read' or 'Have Read'. The app also allows you to rate books into the following categories - 'Pick', 'So-So', 'Pan' or 'Bail' from best to worst respectively. You can decide whether you want to read a book by looking at the rating the book has received from other readers and by analysing the posts or 'Reading moments' by other readers. Litsy is a great community of readers who come together and celebrate books, without any it is spoiler free too.

Platforms: Android and iOS