

Give them a spooky dream, or pull some crazy hijinks we couldn't possibly do in the real world. Maybe sneak in and learn an embarrassing secret or two. Who knows what we'll find in the minds of the members of Digit's test labs.

06 KITT

There was a time when KITT from Knight Rider was the coolest vehicle ever. Actually, now is still that time, we still think it's one of the coolest vehicles ever. The futuristic KITT, a Pontiac Trans-Am, was an AI and a car. It could talk, it could drive itself, and it could do a whole lot more. We basically wouldn't need to worry about our safety on roads with this bad boy driving. We could just chill on our phones, or catch a few more winks of sleep. God knows we need it. KITT is what self-driving cars aspire to be.

07 LIGHTSABER

Considering all the material we have to go on, lightsabers from the Star Wars franchise are incredibly dangerous. But we still want one. Why? Because they're really cool. Seriously, they can cut through just about anything and they can deflect blaster shots and of course, there's the sound they make when you swing them around. Iconic really. Not to mention incredibly easy to store, because the entire blade disappears on the click of a button. What would we use a lightsaber for? Opening packages?

Who cares. To be honest, we'd probably die within ten minutes of actually getting our hands on one..

08 HOVERBOARDS

The Hoverboards in Back to the Future were something we kind of expected to see around now but we're nowhere near the technology right now. Or are we? In the movie, the hoverboards looked like skateboards without wheels that were floating a few inches off the ground. Just the fact that they were floating meant that you could now go places you never could before with a skateboard, you could even skate over water, and without the friction that comes with wheels, you could zoom across at crazy speeds.

Getting hoverboards to work outside of fiction is still we'd say in the future. We've seen prototypes, such as the boards from Hendo Hover, but while they're making progress, it'll be a while till we see anything like the boards from the movie.

09 NEURALYZER

The neuralyzer is a cool little gadget the guys from the M.I.B. use to selectively wipe the memories of bystanders. You know, to keep them in the dark about aliens and stuff. It's as small as a cigar, and we're sure it's M.I.B. protocol to carry one around. If you've watched the movies, then you know that you aren't affected if you're wearing shades. Once someone is flashed with the neuralyzer, they simply need to be told whatever story to fill in the blanks, and they'll go about their business like nothing happened. Now if we had this, we'd love to use it to wipe every embarrassing moment anyone has seen of us. Or in case we miss a deadline, one flash for the big boss man before we tell him that closing is next week. Wink wink.

10 CLOAKING DEVICE

Wouldn't it be cool to go completely invisible with the click of a button. Just think about all the embarrassing situations and awkward encounters you could have avoided if you had the ability to just go invisible. The cloaking device the Predator uses in the movies does exactly that. While the Predator uses it to hunt his prey, we're not really interested in it for those reasons.

Our reasons are naturally quite selfish, we're sure the technology would find better uses in the military or otherwise, most certainly not better off in our hands. We'd just use it for very long games of hide-and-seek or something along those lines.

11 SONIC RING

There's no denying that James Bond has some of the coolest gadgets we've ever seen. Makes it quite difficult to single out just one. There's all the laser pens and the laser watches and the laser glasses. There were a lot of lasers. So we decided to avoid lasers entirely and went with the UHF Ring from Die Another Day instead. Once you've got it around your finger, there's a little button on it that you can press. Turn it on and it immediately shatters any glass that you're currently touching. Hmm, that doesn't sound very safe now that we think about it. Gloves perhaps?

12 I SPY CONTACT LENSES

While I Spy wasn't really a movie that was meant to be taken seriously, the contact lenses that the protagonists use in the movie are pretty darn cool. Think futuristic Google Lens, only, instead of being spectacles that you need to wear, they're contact lenses. And you can use them to communicate with someone else, and you can even share