

digit diary

If you are ever curious about what the Digit gang is up to, this is the place to get all the inside info. From the latest game we're obsessing about to the newest intern we're driving up the wall – it's all here folks.

Aditya has been a bit cagey about getting board games to office ever since he discovered that Dhriti is an extremely volatile player. Read last month's diary to know more. After plenty of badgering, he did finally relent and bring Catan to work. Instead of having to witness another of Dhriti's episodes, we surprisingly saw Mithun emerge as the master of deceit. He likes to believe it was a carefully architected strategy but the others believed it to be sheer dumb luck. Robert didn't play and chose to distance himself from the team. You see, he was about to leave India and head back to Australia so he couldn't get too chummy and then later tear-up when he'd bid his goodbyes. Such a softy...

For a while, it seemed as if Borderlands 2 was about to make a comeback as the boys decided to reel Dhriti into the whole "gaming" scene but everyone quickly moved onto other titles except for Aditya who had to see the new DLC through to the end. Manish got a reluctant Mithun to start playing Dauntless and was surprised to see him take to the game quickly. Everything was fine except that he'd start ranting each time he fired-up the game. You'd think someone hating a game to such an extent would simply stop playing but no, not Mithun.

Every now and then, you'd know that he was playing Dauntless the moment he started ranting again. Manish has been playing MotoGP19 which started off as a rather mundane title. We think the whole mundane perception was because he couldn't ride straight even if his life depended on it. You could see Manish veering from one side to the other as if he were inspecting every single undulation rather than playing the game. Towards the end of the month, he did improve but that didn't stop the team from taking his case each time he'd race.

We had an overload of Linux this month across multiple sections of the magazine so the young-uns had to get their hands dirty with Ubuntu for the first time. As they sat down at the Linux station in bewilderment trying to fact-check articles by trying things, the Linux-veterans would gleefully snigger each time either of the young-uns screwed up. While Aditya was suggesting other distros to check-out, Mithun could be heard shouting "You're gonna learn some new s#1t" each time the kids got it right. Speaking of kids, we had an intern this time. A school kid named - Kyra. We didn't put her through the "Intern Enrichment Program" like we usually do but she did pull her weight in helping create some clues for CTC VII. That reminds us, check out CTC VII (ctc.digit.in) if you want to give your grey cells some much-needed exercise.

QUOTE OF THE MONTH

"You're gonna learn some new s#1t"

Avengers A-Day

Avengers A-Day is an ambitious new title that tells the story of the Avengers and it recreates some of the most iconic characters, scenes and moments. It still has an entirely new story to tell fans as well. We're excited.
