

Fire truck converted to beer tap

Kevin Mullan created a beer truck out of a 1987 Fire Engine. The truck could also serve soda pop in the future. <https://digit.in/july19-10>

Uh-oh Musk!

Elon Musk mixed up the Mars and the Moon, where he tweeted 'OCCUPY MARS' with an image of the Moon. <https://digit.in/july19-11>

There are many ways to use the common material, paper to make art. A wide range of techniques including rolling, folding, cutting and gluing shown here are just a mere glimpse into the possibilities of paper art.

Aditya Madanapalle
aditya@digit.in

An origami horse by Matthieu Georger, who comes up with original designs.

Anja Markiewicz folds miniature origami figures using a toothpick, and calls the art "nano-origami".

Simon Schubert simply folds paper in certain ways to make creases. The collection of these creases result in a piece of art. Every crease is permanent, and there is no going back.

This life-sized origami elephant by Sipho Mabona took four weeks to fold, and is made from a single sheet.

Maude White cuts these designs into paper using a surgical knife.

A paper crane by Cristian Marianciuc, with added details.

This is not a rug, but the art of quilling, which is rolling up strips of paper and gluing them together. The artist is Lisa Nilsson.