India is a country rich with talent and innovation, so it shouldn't come as a surprise that some incredibly popular apps were born right here, in India. Everyone knows about the Zomatos, the BookMyShows and the MakeMyTrips. You don't need us to tell you about those apps, so instead we hunted down other apps of Indian origin that you might not know about, or apps that you might have heard of, but had no clue were of Indian origin. In no particular order, here are seven apps of Indian origin that are worth checking out.

HEALTHIFYME

HealthifyMe is a free-to-use app which allows you to track your diet, lose weight, and even build muscle. It does all your dietary calculations for you, all you need to do is select the food you're eating, or have eaten, from the list of food items on the app. Since the app is made in India, it includes most Indian foods and cuisine that you can think of. You can input your current weight, age, and other parameters into the app and the it will suggest ideal workouts and diets for you.

Additionally, for a fee, the app can also provide a more personal touch in the form of personal coaches and nutritionists who can communicate with you directly to create your diet and workouts. However, we should point out that there are mixed feelings about the paid features that HealthifyMe provides, with some saying it worked wonders for them and others saying that the service was terrible. There's also the HealthifyMe Rist activity tracker, a fitness band that's able to seamlessly pair with the app.

CRICBUZZ

India is mad about cricket, there's no denying it. We just love the sport, so it's really not surprising that an app like Cricbuzz was created right here. Cricbuzz is THE app to have to stay up to date with anything and everything to do with cricket. Live and quickly-updated scores, detailed commentary (we're talking ball by ball here), the latest news and interviews, upcoming matches, and interesting facts and stats about favourite teams and players. What more do you need from an app? It's got its own widget too, to keep track of scores when you're in a pinch and don't have access to a TV or a radio. If you're a cricket fan, chances are you already have this app installed, if not, what are you waiting for?!

PLAYO

Have you ever been a situation where you've wanted to go out and play a sport? It could be anything, basketball, football, volleyball, you name it. The only issue was, you had no one to play with. That's where Playo comes in. The Playo app helps sports players in a neighbourhood find each other. Using the app, you can book courts and host matches. Your 'playpals' can join in on these matches, and you can decide whether you want the match to be open. If so, anyone with the app can join, or else it is limited only to your playpals. Furthermore, the app lets you create playgroups or teams. You can then challenge other playgroups to matches. The app comes with a rating system wherein you rate each other to boost sporting skill ratings on the app. This adds a layer of competition, which is pretty nice.

That's not all there is. Using the app, you can also set up tournaments, find coaches and even track your performance. You can even register for marathons, treks and other events via the app. There's an endless list of sporting activities on the app, we're sure that at least one of them will be right up your alley.
