

BATMAN!

There is a Batman Dam, located on the Batman River, in the Turkish province of Batman, whose capital is Batman City.

Batman vs Super Easter Egg

I Am Legend included a Batman Vs. Superman Easter egg where it predicted the movie, 9 years before it came out!

THE BATMOBILE

ADAM WEST BATMOBILE

The Batmobile from the classic TV series was a modified Lincoln Futura Concept, and was powered by nuclear energy. This is one of the most recognisable batmobiles around.

TIM BURTON BATMOBILE

The 1989 Batman film featured an aerodynamic batmobile with armoured protection, front-facing machine guns and a grappling hook for negotiating corners at high speeds.

BATMAN FOREVER BATMOBILE

The 1995 Batman film had a Batmobile with the Batman logo on the hubcaps. There was a rocket engine on board, and combined with a grappling hook, the vehicle could drive up walls of buildings.

BATMAN & ROBIN BATMOBILE

The 1997-version of the Batmobile was literally "lit", since it came with neon lights running along the chassis. Unlike most other Batmobiles, this one was a single seater.

THE TUMBLER

The vehicle was light but well-armoured, had electric engines for stealth mode, a thruster for speed, and front-facing autocannons. The two front wheels could be ejected to form the Bat-Pod, a motorcycle.

BEN AFFLECK BATMOBILE

The latest cinematic iteration of the Batmobile is confusing to look at because of all the weird angles. The vehicle has dual machine gun turrets, grappling hooks and spiked coils.

MERCH
