

FLIP THE PC SCREEN UPSIDE DOWN

With this prank, controlling the mouse or trackpad will become a Herculean task and your friend may be incited into throwing a bookshelf at you. Be warned! You can flip your friend or colleague's PC screen upside down by right-clicking on the desktop and going to Display Settings (or Screen Resolution on older versions). Now you can select 'Landscape (flipped)' and everything will be flipped upside down. On Mac, you can hold Command + Option simultaneously and go to System Preferences while holding these and you want to transform him into a 'Yes-Man'. Or maybe you just want to change some casual words like 'hi', 'okay' or 'what's up' to something super embarrassing. We've got you covered. On iOS, go to Settings > Keyboard > Shortcuts and then enter your prank phrase into the Phrase box and the commonly-used word into Shortcut. Unfortunately, we couldn't get GBoard for Android devices to work in a similar manner but for the folks out there who have friends using Samsung devices, you can pull this one off as well. Head over to Settings > General Management > Language and Input keys. Go to Display (while still holding the keys) and a new menu called Rotation should appear where you can flip the display and save it. In case your friends aren't too tech-savvy, they are going to spend a good amount of time with their heads cocked to the side like a dog anticipating food trying to figure out what's going on and how to fix it. If they are tech-savvy enough to know what's happening, it will still cause them enough annoyance to revert the display to its original state.

MESS WITH TEXT SHORTCUTS ON YOUR FRIENDS' SMARTPHONES

Maybe you have a friend that is the 'No-Man' in the group

> On-screen keyboard > Samsung Keyboard > Smart Typing > Text Shortcuts (It's buried deep within, yes). Click on Add in Text Shortcuts and enter your common word in Shortcut and your prank phrase in Expanded Phrase. Now, every time your friend types 'hi', as an example, it will automatically replace it to something funny. Note that on Samsung, the user will have to press space after the word for this to work, so use a word that's maybe utilised in between sentences such as 'but' or 'and'.

PHANTOM ENTITY OR HACKER PRANK ON PC

Set up basic or even advanced tasks in Task Scheduler to

PRANK APPS AND GADGETS

PHANTOM KEYSTROKER V2

Phantom Keystroker is an insanity-inducing gadget that looks like a USB thumb drive but it sends random commands when it is plugged into a PC. The device can be set up to cause random mouse movements, random typing and toggling caps-lock on and off.

SONIC NAUSEA

This little gadget supposedly has the ability to make listeners physically sick. You will need to plug the tiny device into a 9-volt battery and it emits "ultra-high frequency soundwaves" which causes queasiness. Even if this doesn't actually make your friends nauseous, it will be super annoying.

SCARY PRANK (IOS)

This app appears to be a game at first but then unexpectedly flashes a scary face which will cause most people to freak out. The best part? It uses the smartphone's camera to capture your friend's reaction!

DUDE, YOUR CAR! (IOS)

Whip up a quick little prank with your smartphone with 'Dude, your car!'. Click a picture of your friend's car and add pretty realistic-looking dents, scratches, smoke and other effects to it to give your friends the scare of their lives. There's a similar app on Android, but the effects are only limited to car burning ones and they don't look too realistic.

THE RESTART RIDDLE

You may even be successful in throwing off tech-savvy individuals with this prank and the best part is that it is diabolically simple to set up and requires you to access your friend or colleague's PC for only a minute or two. All you need to do is right-click on an app they use habitually, go to Properties and then in the 'Target' window type "%windir%\system32\shutdown.exe -r -t 00". Your friend is going to go absolutely crazy trying to figure out what exactly is happening to their system. It may even cause him/her a few sleepless nights, but hey, that's the point of ruthless pranks, isn't it?

open a certain app or window on your PC. It could be as simple as a spooky message on Notepad saying "I'm watching you" that you set up to activate at a specific time or even Internet Explorer opening up over and over if your friend is a Google Chrome user, as if a phantom IE-loving entity is forcing you to join the dark side. Or you could program the task to open a specific web page on the browser every few minutes by creating a new task, running through the wizard and then picking a browser executable, plugging in the site name into the arguments box and then simply set a schedule to repeatedly perform this task every few minutes (depending on how maniacal you actually are).