

Steve Jobs hated Iron Man 2

Bog Iger, Disney CEO, revealed in his book that Steve Jobs hated Iron Man 2 and called him to say that. <https://dgit.in/oct19-31>

Last of Us Part II special note

The Collector's Edition of Last of Us Part II comes with a special note from director, Neil Druckmann. <https://dgit.in/oct19-32> threw in a scene where Lee is talking to The Watchers, and Kevin Feige endorsed the theory as well.

SPIDERMAN IS THE KID IN IRON MAN 2

Yet another confirmed theory, in Iron Man 2, Tony Stark lands behind a young fan wearing the Iron Man mask, and takes out a baddie. For long, fans have been speculating that the kid is actually Peter Parker. The theory was confirmed by Tom Holland to the Huffington Post.

GLADOS IS A BOUND WOMAN

This one is a pretty straightforward theory, that Glados is actually a bound woman. The in-game commentary mentions that the designers went for a creative interpretation of Sandro Botticelli's "The Birth of Venus", but upside down, and using robots. According to a theory by Steve Bowler though, Glados actually resembles in appearance to a gagged and bound woman. Contrary to her claims, she is not actually free. The theory has been elaborated in three subsequent parts, which dives deep into what the designers were trying to convey. This kind of possession of objects seems to be a theme in Portal fan theories, with yet another theory speculating that the companion cubes actually have people trapped within them.

BREAKING BAD IS A PREQUEL TO THE WALKING DEAD

There are some objects that appear in both the Walking Dead and Breaking Bad, including a red Dodge Challenger with black stripes, Blue Sky, and even a coffee machine. This has led to a fan theory that they share a universe, and that Blue Sky actually led to the Zombie Apocalypse.

MATRIX IN A MATRIX

This one was a really popular theory after the release of Reloaded, but kind of fell apart after Revolutions came out. According to the theory, the "reality" that the red pill allows you to step into, is actually another level of artificial simulation, and that the humans still remain plugged into the Matrix. For example, the machines, Zion, and the human battery farms are all in this Matrix, and are all also simulations. This explains how some of Neo's powers work in the real world, and also explains how Smith can possess people who are not part of the Matrix.

AGENT SMITH IS THE CHOSEN ONE

This well argued theory interprets the movies in a really fresh way, and shows how Agent Smith could really be the chosen one. Smith can create multiple copies of himself, can reform after dying, and calls the Oracle "mom" just before assimilating her. In an interpretation of the prophecy, it is Smith who ends up having power to change the Matrix. The end of the war and the destruction of the Matrix could equally be considered a consequence of his actions, as Neo's.

SHERLOCK HOLMES IS AN ANCESTOR OF SPOCK

This evolved from an easter egg, to a fan theory, to straight up canon over time. Sherlock Holmes and Spock seem to be in the same universe, as Star Trek has a ship named the USS Sherlock Holmes. Spock also quotes a famous ancestor as saying "if you eliminate the impossible, whatever remains, however improbable, must be the solution."

THE GREAT POKEMON WAR

Fans have explained the lack of a normal adult population in the Pokemon universe as a consequence of a violent war called Pokemon war or Kanto war. A dark interpretation of Pokemon Go is that the game takes place before the war, when the training of Pokemon is a new art, and all the Pokemon are still being discovered. 