

Foxconn's "Innovation Centres"

After months of inactivity, Foxconn has admitted their Wisconsin Innovation Centres are officially on hold <https://digit.in/nov19-15>

Apple TV app on Fire TV

The Apple TV app is now available on select Fire TV devices making Apple TV+ available to more users <https://digit.in/nov19-16>

TECH FOR YOUR FUR-BABIES

Can you really call yourself a pet parent if you don't love indulging your furry companions?

Dhriti Datta | dhriti@digit.in

It's a marvellous time to be a pet. The modern age has ushered in an array of high-tech pet products and innovations that make the ole' stuffed animals or feather-on-a-strings pet products look dated and downright obsolete. The pet retail market is booming and the global pet care market is touted to reach USD 202.6 billion by 2025, according to a report by Grand View Research Inc. Millennials, with their elaborate technology know-how, are more likely to utilise tech products, in some way or the other, to care for and keep track of their pets, as per Wakefield Research.

Grand View Research Inc. also revealed that dogs hold the largest market share in the pet market industry while cats are growing in popularity and cat products are expected to witness lucrative growth in the coming years. Large companies as well as new startups have understood the dynamic nature of this industry and are innovating 'smarts' for pets at a rapid rate. This expeditious development is only natural since pet parents can be downright maniacal for their pets and can spend obnoxious amounts of cash to appease them and of course, for their well-being and nutrition. Let's have a look at some of the coolest tech gadgets that have been innovated in recent years that will delight pet parents and pets alike.

PETCUBE PLAY 2

We call pet owners 'pet parents', so it only makes sense to have a product that is essentially like a baby monitor but for your beloved fur babies. PetCube

Play 2 is a smart pet cam powered by AI which acts as your pet's smartphone-enabled robotic nanny. Its video function allows you to check up on your pets when you're away and even talk to them via the two-way communication system built into the device. It even lets you dispense treats for your pets remotely using your smartphone. Additionally, the cat version has a built-in laser toy so you can make your little feline scurry around remotely as well.

WAGZ GO SMART

The Wagz Go Smart is a catflap, but for dogs. This device was unveiled at CES 2019 and is extremely pricey, however, it does ensure that only 'certified' doggos are let into the house via a high-tech tag which is scanned by the flap. The device can be configured to give each collar-tag access for a limited period of time. The flap can also record motion-activated live HD videos. By pairing the device to your smartphone, users can get handy alerts to let them know when their furry friend has left the house.

LAVVIEBOT S AND INUBOX

No one and we really mean no one, enjoys the tedious chore of having to clean out a cat's litter box once it's done with its business. The LavvieBot S is a gadget that automatically cleans up the box, keeps it topped up and also filters out the pungent odour. The device is Wi-Fi-enabled and has an accompanying app which sends users alerts when the litter reserve is running low and keeps track of your cat's daily 'business' routine.

Inubox is a similar gadget, but for dogs. It is a self-cleaning toilet for dogs with owners who live in houses with backyards or gardens. The device