

digit diary

If you are ever curious about what the Digit gang is up to, this is the place to get all the inside info. From the latest game we're obsessing about to the newest intern we're driving up the wall – it's all here folks.

After many months of effort, we're finally at the point where we can announce that the Minecraft phase is finally over. The Ender Dragon was slain and a few laps of victory were run along the narrow corridors within the office. While it was only Dhriti playing Minecraft in the end, the rest were there in spirit helping her through her journey to kill the final boss. Pssst – Manish helped killed the Ender Dragon for her.

To further celebrate, Dhriti decided that she was going to take some time off and head to some exotic islands in the middle of the ocean to enjoy the sun and pristine beaches. She, however, came back burnt to a crisp. Even a week after she was back, you could still find huge patches of her skin that had peeled off, on and around her desk. disgusting

Diwali sales were an absolute nightmare with one good offer followed by another. It was really hard to stay away from all the posts on news sites, social media and even casual conversations on the street were about the sales. The folks in the Test Centre had stayed away from purchasing anything until Dhriti stated that she was depressed because she had to make a choice between getting a Switch or a PC. This is because she'd just exhausted all her finances on the holiday.

So to spite her Mithun got himself a Nintendo Switch. He makes sure to keep the Switch clearly visible right where she can see it to make it a constant reminder of what she's going to miss out on. Sad part is that he spent his entire budget in one go and now has to wait a month to get any games. So we can't really say who's more depressed with the Switch at the moment.

Right before Diwali, Google Pay came out with a silly contest about collecting stamps. While it did seem easy at the beginning, things soon turned serious as certain stamps were found to be difficult to obtain. Which of course, led to extreme measures. GPay gifts were given out to everyone in the office. Long lost friends were rediscovered as gifting notifications popped up every hour, asking for stamps.

Folks were going out hunting for lit diyas to take pictures of, while some simply googled for images to scan. Every single transaction was being routed through the app to gain more stamps just to be the first to collect 'em all. At the time of writing this, no one has completed the challenge and it would be really funny if it remains that way till the end.
