Reports indicate rampant fake software update malware

According to tech security company, Zscaler, crooks are hacking websites to deliver fake software update notices to over 1,00,000 users. First, the delinquents hack into various insecure WordPress sites utilising the theme plugin vulnerability and subsequently inject malicious redirect scripts into these sites. Then, they are able to display a fake Flash Player update alert to users on the site. If a user clicks the 'Update' button, the malicious file is downloaded. Not just that, even if the user clicks on the 'Later' button, they are still redirected to the page to download the malicious file. If the 'software update' is installed, the RAT (Remote Access Trojan) malware will transfer the user's information to the attacker's site in an encrypted format.

Moto Razr 2019

Nostalgia-evoker, Moto Razr 2019, has been confirmed to launch to India. It is an absolute stunner, featuring the clamshell design the original Moto Razr popularised. Except that the 2019 iteration will ditch the T9 keypad and feature a screen on both, the top and bottom half of the flip phone. It sports a 6.2-inch flexible OLED display that opens up vertically and a 2.7-inch Quick View OLED display on the outside. Powered by a Snapdragon 710 SoC with 4GB/6GB RAM and 64GB/128GB internal storage, the device will run Android 9.0 Pie. There are three cameras in total – a 16MP lens, a Dual Pixel PDAF TOF 3D camera, as well as a 5MP selfie camera. The fingerprint sensor will reside on the button on the substantially-sized chin of the phone. The clamshell phone will feature a 2510 mAh battery. We cannot wait to see it in real life and reminisce about simpler times.

Cometin

As Android as an OS is increasingly becoming more sophisticated, the need to root your devices and install a custom ROM is diminishing. However, there are still a few things you may want to switch around that usually require root access. Right? Wrong. Enter Cometin, an app developed by XDA member Stjin which features a collection of tweaks that accomplish different things. All the tweaks are bundled into one wholesome app by using Google's Dynamic Delivery Modules which allow users to download the specific files for the features they are particularly interested in. There are eight modules as of now including Ambient Display, Better Rotation, Hide heads-up, Remap assistant, Caffeine, Darker brightness, Parallel and Cometin Sync.

The Ambient Display module allows users to design custom ambient displays for their smartphones. Better Rotation module allows you to force all apps to rotate in different screen orientations even if they can't. Caffeine allows you to set intricate timers for screen on and off times. Darker Brightness pushes a phone's brightness limits on the lower end by applying a dark overlay to cut screen brightness beyond the default levels. This is especially useful for lower-end phones that have poor low brightness. The Parallel module lets users create a second instance or a duplicate install of a particular app by using the work profile. Hide heads-up dismisses notifications that have been set to have lower priorities. Remap assistant remaps your assistant trigger or physical button. Finally, Cometin Sync allows users to sync notifications, URLs and more between a phone and PC. We're hoping for new modules to be added in the future, but these are plenty useful as well and give users who grew accustomed to rooting some much-loved rooting functionalities.
