

or TV series, and a minimum IMDB or RT score the content should have to appear.

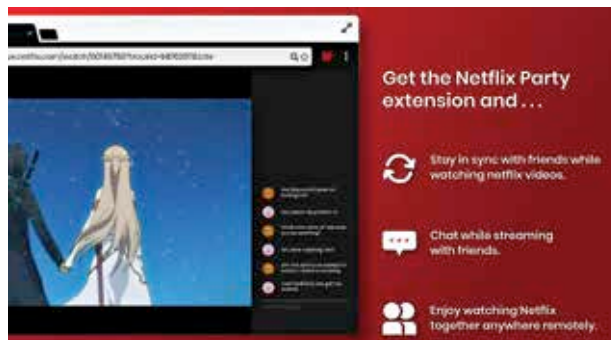

NO BREAKS BINGERS

True bingers know no breaks, do they? Which is why the annoying “Are you still watching?” prompt that materialises every couple of hours can get downright infuriating. Additionally, small things such as having to manually skip intros or title sequences and wait 5 seconds before the next episode begins can also get the binger in you triggered. We value your sanity, which is why we’re suggesting Never Ending Netflix (https://digit.in/NEflix), a Google Chrome extension that puts an end to the madness that is annoying prompts, elongated intros and credits. Skip all of that and binge on.

HOST A NETFLIX PARTY

No, we don’t mean having all your friends over and watching some popular ‘Flix series. We are talking about yet another nifty Chrome extension called Netflix Party (https://digit.in/NetflixParty) which has your back through trying times in long-distance friendships or relationships. If you want to watch a TV series with some beloved long-distance friends, you can now watch the TV show at the exact same time as them with this extension.

After installing Netflix Party, you will obtain a shareable link that opens to the movie or TV show that you’re watching at the moment, perfectly synced. If you’re one of those who love discussing the ongoings as the show proceeds, there’s even a group chat feature which allows both users to comment on the screen while the shows plays.

Easily watch Netflix content alongside your long-distance buddies

Bonus tip: If you want to watch a TV show in sync with a long-distance buddy, but are on the go, use Kast (mobile app on iOS and Kast Web available on Google Chrome on Android). It lets you watch Netflix, YouTube and other streaming platforms alongside your friends.

FLOATING NETFLIX

Sometimes, you just want to casually watch a TV series on Netflix while at work or while completing some work at home itself. You can use split-screen, but, the window still too large and can be distracting. Or maybe, you need to use split-screen never interact with the micro-browser. Ideal for watching Netflix at work... Shhh, you didn’t hear it from us!

TEST FEATURES BEFORE THEY GO PUBLIC

Netflix is tasked with constantly reinventing itself in order to stay on top of the streaming industry and the needs of the new-age customers. If you want to be one of those who test out features even before they release, the streaming service allows you to do so. Simply head over to Accounts, then go to Settings and find the ‘Test Participation’ option and toggle it on. This is where you will get to

You can try out features, some of which may never see the light of the day!

(both screens) for work purposes. Helium browser solves this issue for Mac users. The browser keeps the media playing in a transparent ‘floating’ window that is always overlayed over other windows. The best part is that you can still click, double-click, scroll and drag behind the floating Helium window and experience a host of features Netflix is testing such as new interfaces, rating systems, pre-roll trailers and more.

TURN NETFLIX SHOWS INTO AUDIOBOOKS

If you’re otherwise occupied and cannot keep your eyes on your screen or mobile phone, or if you simply want to HEAR a Netflix TV series instead of watching it, like an audiobook, you have a nifty feature called ‘Audio Description’ on Netflix. This little-known feature is chiefly seen on Netflix Original shows including ones like Riverdale, The Witcher, Ozark, You, Stranger Things and more.

This is especially useful for the blind or people who have just gone through eye surgery since it gives a detailed description of everything that’s happening on the screen including physical actions, facial expressions, costumes, settings and scene changes. Users can also continue to enjoy several TV series and films in this format across multiple platforms such as mobile phones, PC, tablet, console and more.

CLEAR YOUR ‘CONTINUE WATCHING’ QUEUE

One of the frustrations faced by Netflix users is the overwhelming number of TV series and films piling up in their ‘Continue Watching’ list. These are usually infiltrated by those partially-watched shows and films that you started off but couldn’t finish for some reason or the other. Maybe, it was just not the kind of content you’re accustomed to watching, maybe it’s just mind-numbingly boring, or it’s the cringy content that’s your guilty pleasure. You certainly don’t want your friends seeing that at your next Netflix party, do you?

To clear the list, head over to ‘Account’ and then go to ‘My Profiles’. Find the option for ‘Viewing Activity’. This is where Netflix stores what you’ve watched. You can simply click ‘X’ on any show that you’d like to remove from your Continue Watching queue. 