

GEEK CULTURE IS OUR WAY OF LIFE, AND ENCOMPASSES MOVIES, GAMES, COMICS, AND TRENDS FROM ACROSS THE GLOBE

THIS MONTH IN CULT:

With the number of streaming services on the rise, this month's culture feature will help you pick the best one for you. After that, head to community, where you can find out about how video games improve your brain function. Then, take a look at how AMD has been jebaiting NVIDIA these past few months in Rantz.

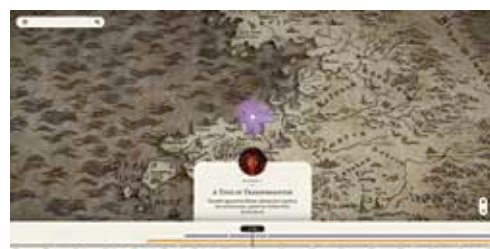

Colin Farrell officially confirmed as The Penguin

The Batman director, Matt Reeves, took to Twitter to vaguely confirm that Colin Farrell will be taking up the role of The Penguin in the upcoming DC Universe film. Reeves tweeted a GIF of Farrell captioned with, "Wait - is that you, #Oz?".
<https://dgit.in/ThePenguin>

WHAT'S NEW

Netflix release an interactive map for The Witcher

Netflix's The Witcher was a wildly popular release for the streaming service which was also known for its convoluted timelines and multiple locations. It could be relatively confusing for someone who delved right into the show without prior exposure to the books or games. The streaming service released a dynamic, interactive map which details the timelines clearly and categorically delves into the lives and whereabouts of the three main characters - Geralt, Yennefer and Ciri. The series is based on books by Andrzej Sapkowski which yielded massive amounts of source material to work with. The interactive map also has a general overview of the series' universe's history. Additionally, they have also marked all the episodes of the show. In case you want to learn more about a particular character, location, monster or event, Netflix has even added a handy search bar to the webpage. You can check the map out by using the following link.

<https://dgit.in/WitcherMap>

Remake of Mewtwo Strikes Back coming to Netflix

The CGI remake of the very first Pokémon movie, Mewtwo Strikes Back (1998), is coming exclusively to Netflix outside of Japan and Korea. The remake is named 'Mewtwo Strikes Back - Evolution' and will be released on February 27, as per The Pokémon Company. With the ever-expanding popularity of the Pokémon franchise across different mediums such as Pokémon Go, Pokémon Sword and Shield, Detective Pikachu and more, it is only natural that streaming giant, Netflix, wants to get their paws wet by hosting the franchise's remake, capitalising on good ol' nostalgia. Reportedly, the story will be a retelling of the original, with a slightly different supporting cast of characters and modern 3D CGI. It will take fans all the way back to the beloved Kanto region, made famous by the TV show and the Pokémon Red and Blue games, where we will see Ash Ketchum, Misty and Brock, and more importantly, Ash's Pikachu. The official trailer for the film (dubbed in English, of course) was released on the Official Pokémon YouTube channel on January 21.

<https://dgit.in/MSBevolution>

Games of Thrones prequel slated for 2022 release

The much-awaited Game of Thrones prequel, House of the Dragon, is on track for a 2022 release. According to Variety, this was confirmed by HBO President of Programming, Casey Bloys.
<https://dgit.in/GOTprequel2020>

Death Note coming back after 12 years

While the original Death Note manga ended over a decade ago, the series is returning for a one-shot chapter in 2020. The new 87-page-long one-shot will be featured in the February issue of Jump SQ magazine.
<https://dgit.in/DeathNoteReturns>

March 2020 release for Westworld Season 3

As per the official HBO Asia Facebook page, Westworld, will be returning with its third season on March 15, 2020. A short teaser was also released which teased some of the upcoming events in the show.
<https://dgit.in/WestworldS03>