Sonic the Hedgehog is now the highest-grossing video game film in the US

Amere month after its release, Sonic the Hedgehog has officially become the highest-grossing video game film in the US. It raced past the record set by Detective Pikachu, which released in 2019. Sonic opened at a whopping $57 million over its first three days, making it the best opening weekend for a video game film. Since then, the film has continued to shine at the box office in theatres across the world. The positive response can also be attributed to the fact that the director, Jeff Bowler, decided to push the release of Sonic in order to address Sonic's character design which received a lot of backlash from fans. The newly-designed character gained approval from fans and there was a lot of praise surrounding the willingness of the studio and director to take and work on fan feedback. The film raked in $145.8 million USD as per the latest count. <https://dgit.in/yaysonic>
