

Fill the Witcher sized void

Wondering what to watch after running out of Witcher episodes? Looper has got you covered. <https://digit.in/apr20-53>

TV Shows getting a reboot

If movies are getting rebooted, why not TV Shows? Here are the classics getting a fresh start this year. <https://digit.in/apr20-54>

2017. Ving Rhames also covered the song for an Arby's commercial back in 2016. In 2019, the rapper Logic recreated and used parts of the song in his track "Don't Be Afraid to Be Different". Will Smith even made an appearance in the video of the song from the album 'Confessions of a Dangerous Mind'.

ACTUAL BANDS BEING FEATURED IN SHOWS

Buffy and her friends, in the show Buffy The Vampire Slayer, often met at a bar to discuss the ongoings of the week. This was the perfect backdrop for the show to bring in some rather interesting artists and bands to appear on the show. The show saw a number of alt-rock performers like Cibo Matto and The Breeders. But, perhaps, the most memorable performance is the one by Michelle Branch as she belts out 'Goodbye to You'. The track is aptly set to a montage of the gang's personal relationships going awry because of a spell gone wrong.

Another show that had the perfect setting to involve real-life artists was the American musical drama Empire that was created for Fox. The show saw the likes of Snoop Dogg and Courtney Love being on the show during its run-time. Even during the shot of Bunky's funeral, they brought out the big guns and invited the legendary Gladys Knight to perform. Bryshere Yazuan Gray (stage name- Yazz) is a popular rapper who brings the role of Hakeem Lyon to life. His track 'Drip Drop' is so insanely catchy that it is likely to stay in your head for a long time. Each and every track on the show is there for a reason. It has something to add to the narrative.

SETTING UP THE EXPERIENCE

Choosing the right track at a particular moment in the show could help your audience have the exact feeling or experience the exact emotion you are going for. The right song playing in the background while your character is heartbroken can be a definite tearjerker. Or the right background track for a battle sequence can make you feel involved.

A less-known fact about the ABC show Grey's Anatomy was that it gave a plat-

SHOW	TRACK	ARTIST
Big Little Lies	That Was Yesterday	Leon Bridges
X-Files	Theme Song	Mark Snow
Gossip Girl	Bad Romance	Lady Gaga
Stranger Things	Kids	Kyle Dixon & Michael Stein
True Blood	Bad Things	Jace Everett
Glow	Heaven is a Place on Earth	Belinda Carlisle
Miami Vice	In The Air Tonight	Phil Collins
Breaking Bad	Who's Gonna Save My Soul	Gnarls Barkley
The Walking Dead	Lead Me Home	Jamie N Commons
Glee	Respect	Aretha Franklin

form to some up and coming indie artists to showcase their talents. The Canadian indie pop duo of Tegan and Sara's 'Where Does The Good Go' was instrumental in setting up the tone for the friendship that was to develop between Meredith and Christina going further. A large part of the show's success comes from choosing the apt tracks for their emotional sequences, which gripped their audiences and reeled them in further.

Anime series also bring with them their expertise in choosing the right sound for their battle and action sequences. Their opening and closing credits also have tracks that have been chosen by producers and supervisors who knew exactly what they were doing. A track like Enfin Apparu in Magi: Labyrinth of Magic can give you goosebumps with its intensity. Vogel im Kafig from Attack on Titan will draw you into a different universe with its vocals and composition. Naruto Shippuden also comes with its unique soundtrack as popular as the series. Keisei Gyakuten which roughly translates to "Reverse Situation" is an anthem for true-blue Naruto Shippuden fans.

IN THE INDIAN SCENARIO

While Indian TV shows were primarily dependent on tracks from Bollywood movies, the up and coming web series industry is taking soundtrack choices very seriously. When Netflix chose Divine and Phenom to come up for a track for their show Sacred Games, little did they know that Kaam 25 would cross over 40 million views. Darshan Raval has sung and composed Yaara Teri Yaari for the Amazon Prime show Four More Shots Please (often touted as the Indian version of Sex and the City). It's crossed over 25 million views and the number is steadily growing, in spite of the season having aired in the early half of 2019. The English title track to Dice Media's Little Things has crossed over 1 million views and seems to be climbing with every passing day.

It comes as no surprise then, that the world of web series OSTs is now attracting some bigwigs. Shreya Ghoshal and Anime series have been using some very interesting tracks to increase intensity especially in battle and action sequences.

Dev Negi's Yeh Kya Hua for the ALTBalaji series Broken But Beautiful has garnered over 10 million views. Producers are also leaning towards original tracks for their shows since it costs almost 1/10th of Bollywood music syndication deals. This is an exciting time for the world of Indian original content and the growing popularity of OSTs of these web series just adds to the excitement. d