

ANIME

Toaru Kagaku no Railgun T

★★★★☆ | The "A Certain Magical Index" anime franchise has been around for a long long time. One of its successful spin-offs is Toaru Kagaku no Railgun, or the 'A Certain Scientific Railgun' series. More recent seasons of the 'A Certain' series have been pretty bad. A Certain Scientific Accelerator, another spin-off featuring yet another character was pretty bland, and the third season of A Certain Magical Index was outright horrible with some of the most terrible writing we've seen in the franchise so far. Naturally, because of this we were a tad worried about Railgun T (the T is basically like third, for season three). Thankfully, the third season of Railgun is nothing like the previous two showings from JC Staff. To the point where we think they were just trolling us with how bad those two shows were. Railgun T is possibly the best season in the Railgun series, with great visuals and animation to back it up. Makes you wonder if half of JC Staff was just asleep for Index III and Accelerator.

In this arc, the Grand Champion Star Festival is coming up, which is a city-wide tournament of sorts. Naturally, Railgun Misaka Mikoto and her friends will be participating in it. However, during this festival, the usually closed-away-to-the-world Academy City opens up to visitors, including people who don't have good intentions. The show was still airing when we wrote this with only 8 episodes out so far. Here's hoping it stays good.

COMIC

Twin Worlds Issue #1

★★★★☆ | In a futuristic Earth, mankind has begun the herculean task of terraforming Mars, and has some kind of permanent base on the Moon as well. A megacorporation monopolises the fuel economy for spacecraft, which also happens to be a narcotic. The same company thus enjoys a monopoly in two businesses. Following months of unexplained occurrences, including interrupted communications, abnormal readings, and strange weather events, a massive portal opens up over the Earth. The gravitational instruments detect something massive on the other side of the portal. Turns out that there is a planet there, Tassaroth, with natives that appear to be elves stuck in the medieval ages. The planet also has warlocks with arcangel magicks and Dragons. The Humans obviously invade, but the opposing Vin Raja, has dark secrets of his own that could undermine his power over the Drakkaran nation if exposed. There are no good sides here, and this is a clash of two evils. Twin Worlds is a stunningly illustrated mashup of science fiction and fantasy, one that feels natural. You will see arrows taking on soldiers with exosuits and bolters, and dragons sharing the frame with spaceships. This is a promising and fresh new series that is exquisite and fun.

EVERYTHING'S DELAYED!
(UP AND COMING)

MOVIE

New Mutants

Not your typical Marvel movie, New Mutants actually falls under the horror genre, and is based on five young mutants who've just discovered their powers while being held captive.

Release date: 8 April 2020
(delayed)

MOVIE

No Time to Die

The newest entrant to the James Bond franchise, No Time to Die is the 25th Bond film and will also be the longest one to date. This will also be Daniel Craig's last film as 007.

Release date: 12 November 2020

TV SHOW

Black Widow

The next movie in phase four of the MCU will feature the Black Widow in an origin story of sorts, where we'll learn more about her family and how she became a top assassin.

Release date: 24 April 2020
(delayed)