

Hank-ccine

Tom Hanks donated his blood in hopes that the plasma could help develop a vaccine for COVID-19. <https://dgit.in/may20-45>

PIP on WhatsApp for Netflix trailers

Netflix trailers can also be played in WhatsApp's native picture-in-picture player now. <https://dgit.in/may20-46>

THE LIGHTHOUSE (2019)

<https://dgit.in/Lighthouse>

The Lighthouse is a psychological horror film that follows the story of two lighthouse keepers on a mysterious remote island. The film's primary focus is the gradual descent into madness due to confinement and isolation. This might be the perfect movie to watch and relate to, if you are in lockdown. The film was created to look vintage by design and to pull the audience into the theme as well. It has got fantastic storytelling, impressive cinematography, haunting music and is riddled with drunken sailors singing and tap-dancing to sea shanties. To top that off, it stars Green Goblin and Batman.

MOTHER (MADEO) (2009)

<https://dgit.in/Mother>

From the Oscar-winning director of Parasite – Bong Joon-ho, Mother is a Korean psychological thriller. This film follows the story of a mother's efforts to solve a murder that has been pinned onto her son, who suffers from autism. This film explores the morality of a mother. As to how far will a mother go, to defend her son. The film takes various twists and turns and plays around with the viewer's mind before reaching its unexpected conclusion. Although the film takes a while to catch up, once it does you will remain glued to your seat.

FILTH (2013)

<https://dgit.in/Filth>

Filth is a satirical psychological crime thriller, that follows the story of a drug-addled cop who begins to experience severe hallucinations while trying to solve a murder case. The film is riddled with black comedy and sexual themes. It sheds light on the effects of drug addiction and mental health by making light of it. Basically, it is a mix of stupid English frat boy humour along with something dark lurking within.

SPLIT (2016)

<https://dgit.in/split>

Directed by M Night Shyamalan, Split follows the story of Kevin, a dissociative identity disorder patient, who kidnaps three teenagers from a parking lot. This film is second in Shyamalan's Unbreakable trilogy of movies and explores how and to what degree, dissociative identity disorder could affect someone's personality. In this case 23!

The film has a decent story with beautifully executed cinematography and acting that will keep you intrigued.

TAXI DRIVER (1976)

<https://dgit.in/TaxiDriver>

You might have come across a clip of a young Robert De Niro looking at a mirror and saying, "You talkin' to me" floating around somewhere on the internet. This popular hard-hitting improv is from Martin Scorsese's Taxi Driver. Without spoiling much, Taxi Driver follows the story of Travis Bickle (Robert De Niro), who takes a job as a New York cab driver. Due to insomnia, he operates at night. With the passage of time and some horrifying experiences, Travis soon starts to detach from reality and begins dreaming about taking up the burden of cleaning the filthy city of New York. Despite its slow build-up like most Scorsese movies, this movie is in a class of its own and is worth the wait.

SHUTTER ISLAND (2010)

<https://dgit.in/Shutter-Island>

This Leonardo Di Caprio and Ruffalo starrer is another one of Scorsese's all-time classics. The story follows two US marshals that are sent to an asylum on a remote island to investigate a missing patient. The movie takes various twists and turns and uses camera tricks to make you question reality. The less you know about this, the better. By the time you are done with this film, we bet you will start looking for theories on Reddit.

BLACK SWAN (2010)

<https://dgit.in/BlackSwan>

Black Swan follows the story of Nina, a ballerina, who slips into madness when her instructor chooses to replace her with Lily. The film sheds light on stress, anxiety and eating disorders to convey her psychotic breakdown. It skillfully uses symbolism to represent those aspects of psychosis in a genius manner.

THE MACHINIST (2004)

<https://dgit.in/TheMachinist>

Unlike the melvins that sleep throughout the day and stay awake at night, only to claim to be suffering from insomnia, The Machinist follows the life of a real sufferer. After having not slept for months, Trevor (Christian Bale), starts seeing hallucinations of a mysterious man stalking him. With the suspenseful story, cinematography and brilliantly executed acting, this film is sure to set your sleep schedule right.

