

currently live on the crowdfunding platform Milaap. Its objective during this pandemic is to distribute essential kits to families that will last them at least a week. These packages contain essential rations, including grains such as wheat and rice, onions, sugar, soap, washing powder, and more. So far, they've distributed over 5.6 lakh kits across several cities in India and are looking for funding to distribute even more.

SWIGGY – HOPE, NOT HUNGER

Popular food delivery app, Swiggy has launched two fundraiser campaigns on Milaap. The first one is aimed at providing meals for those who can't provide for themselves. The lockdown has also resulted in many restaurants shutting down. These restaurants run the risk of shutting down permanently due to the drop in business. Swiggy wants to help these restaurants and their staff get through the pandemic as well.

The second fundraiser is to help their delivery agents, who are essential workers in this scenario and risk being infected on a daily basis. The fund has been set up as a relief for Swiggy's delivery partners and will provide them with income protection insurance, medical coverage for themselves and family, and essential care packages.

GIVE INDIA

Give India has organised and featured several fundraisers, all of which are aimed at helping different groups of people, from doctors and nurses working on the frontlines, to daily wagers and the destitute. They're also working towards providing food and essentials in addition to prevention kits for the needy and poor. To this end, they're working with several NGO partners and organisations including Flipkart, Myntra, Grofers, Radio Mirchi, and many more.

KASHTAKARI PANCHAYAT

Kashtakari Panchayat, in partnership with GiveIndia and Ketto, are working to help provide essentials for the waste-pickers of Pune and Pimpri-Chinchwad. Even though the city is on lockdown, these workers are still working to keep the city clean and safe. Unfortunately, due to the lockdown, the recycling economy has shut down, this includes services like scrap shops that are a major part of their income. The Kashtakari Panchayat is working to provide these workers with support kits, which include essential rations like grains and food, and protective equipment to help them go about their jobs with reduced risk.

GOONJ

Goonj is an NGO that's focusing on providing immediate assistance to people affected by the COVID-19 pandemic. So far, they've reached 17,700 families and several thousands of individuals and provided them with ration kits. The families and distressed helped by Goonj mostly belonged to those of migrant workers, daily wagers, transgenders, sex workers, the elderly and those living in remote villages.

In addition to ration kits, Goonj is also making cloth sanitary pads for distribution and is working to support local community kitchens to help them supply basic rations to migrant workers and labourers across the country. They've reportedly already distributed over 77,800 cooked meals.

They've also made 42,800 face masks for distribution along with 1,500 litres of sanitiser.

SEEDS

SEEDS has partnered with the Government of India and the state governments of Bihar, Delhi, Karnataka, Kerala, Maharashtra, Odisha and, Uttarakhand to provide support for the elderly, children and frontline health workers and more during this pandemic. Their focus is providing financial support and essential services to daily wage earners, in addition to providing hygiene kits and food rations to marginalised families, old age homes and orphanages. They're also working with the government to support the various temporary quarantine facilities that are being set up. They are also helping local administrations with their health systems by providing support as and where needed.
