

More mask fails

From medieval armour to full body suits, here are more innovative and questionable DIY masks. <https://digit.in/jul20-59>

DIY mask

Instructions on how to create a mask that actually works, along with details on how to wear it properly. <https://digit.in/jul20-60>

Mask fails

With masks being essential to going out in public, but them selling out in medical stores and online portals, people are forced to come up with DIY solutions. These masks are creative but questionable solutions.

Aditya Madanapalle |
aditya@digit.in

Credit: NEERAZ CHATURVEDI / Shutterstock.com

↑ This is a jugadoo mask that a man from Madhya Pradesh put together which uses rather gaudy straps that scores high on the bling quotient. The "respirator" is made from a PVC chimney top. A for effort, but the mask is probably not good enough to keep out stupidity let alone the coronavirus.

← Reddit user closes52's daughter did not have a mask to go outside, and so decided to embrace the dark side. As RobinC83 pointed out at least she won't be bumping her head.

← Well, if you are using a CD from 2003, make sure to update the definitions for the novel coronavirus, or else this installation will not work.

← This is just one example from the German-Namibian designer Max Siedentopf's art project titled "How-To Survive a Deadly Global Virus". We will be happy to survive that mask.

← This post from Chinese social media show how people were adapting to a dearth of masks in the places where the pandemic hit the earliest.

← Reddit user qevoh posted this example of a man from Russia using the skin of a Fennel, a carrot-like vegetable which is known to have antiviral properties.

← No mask? No Problem! This inverted plastic box plonked on the head is one of the few "out of the box" solutions that looks like it could actually work.