

of emails to answer, calls to respond to, and interactions to set up, so aspiring social media influencers may actually end up getting overwhelmed by the amount of work to be done, which may cause them to produce subpar content or even quit. Instead, why not leverage the power of technology and make it work for you? You can use an array of social media automation tools that will take care of mundane tasks while you spend more time focusing on nurturing your creativity. In this article, we will be dishing out some tips and tricks that can help you automate your social media.

MAKE USE OF AUTOMATION TOOLS AND SOFTWARE

The most prevalent method of automating social media apps is by leveraging the power of social media automation software and tools. Some of the most popular tools include Hootsuite, Buffer, Mentionlytics, and SproutSocial. Each one of these tools has some features that are common to all of them and some that are specific to the particular software. Essentially, these tools allow you to schedule social media posts down to the date and time for months beforehand, monitor your accounts, pick up on posts that mention your account, brand or hashtag and more. For example, on HootSuite, you can schedule up to 350 posts at once, with images too!

While these tools are pretty comprehensive on their own, you can also boost them by using tools such as IFTTT and Zapier. These resources allow for cross-communication before apps, websites and systems allowing you to program even more intricate tasks. For example, you can schedule Facebook posts according to your Google Calendar by simply using a hashtag in the Google Calendar entry. This can be made to indicate to IFTTT that the content needs to be scheduled on your Facebook page. You can also use IFTTT to send posts with particular hashtags to a particular album on your Facebook Page or even to your Flickr account. There's a host of recipes and combinations of commands you can use on both Zapier and IFTTT to intricately plan and automate your social media activity.

You can utilise Hootsuite to schedule posts on platforms such as Facebook, Twitter, and others

SETTING UP CHATBOTS

Creating chatbots is an efficient way to automate your social media handles. This is especially useful for those who get an inordinate amount of DMs or personal messages in a day, all of which can be hard to respond to personally. Chatbots can be used to streamline marketing, providing customer support, and improve follower experience on social media. For example, if a follower asks you for something simple such as your discord link on social media, you can create automated replies to ensure that these questions don't go unanswered. Companies such as 1-800-Flowers have integrated chatbots extremely efficiently into

Streamlabs is a convenient chatbot service for streamers

LivePerson, MobileMonkey, and India's homegrown Verloop.io. If you want to go a bit deeper and make your own bot for Instagram, you can check out this comprehensive tutorial - <http://dgit.in/instapy>.

Additionally, platforms such as Streamlabs provide streamers on YouTube and Twitch an easy way to answer to questions that viewers type in the live chat during a live stream. You can add certain responses for particular commands or inputs. So, if a viewer wants to know how long you've been live streaming, they can enter something like "luptime" and the chatbot reverts with the appropriate response. Do note that you should use chatbots sparingly since overusing them can cause your followers to feel disconnected from you as a creator.

SYNC YOUR BLOG WITH SOCIAL MEDIA PLATFORMS

If you have an active blog on WordPress and would like to automate sharing your articles on social media whenever you post, you can actually sync your blog with your social media accounts to do so. There are a few plugins you can use to add social share buttons onto your page which allow you to automatically post on social media when you've published a new article on your blog. Some examples include Magic Embeds, OG Tags, Social Media Popup, and Actify. Alternatively, you can sync your blog and social media updates in advance with tools such as CoSchedule. You can plan your publishing calendar in conjunction with the social media platform that you want to share updates on.

CURATE CONTENT FOR YOUR SOCIAL MEDIA

While original content is always king when it comes to content sharing on social media, sometimes you