EVERYTHING IS HOT!

The world clearly has had enough of the doomscrolling and finally we are seeing new trends that have nothing to do with Zoom calls.

JOYSCROLLING

After all the months of doomscrolling, this chaotic year is finally coming to an end, and it is in this year more than any that people need a sense of starting things over fresh. Replacing what has become an unhealthy obsession of doomscrolling, is something that is totally the opposite, joyscrolling. This is such a great idea that we are amazed nobody thought of it before. The idea is to go on a media and content diet, that is selected to contain only positive and uplifting content. For some reason, when someone became the president in some country, the instances of jubilant joyscrolling skyrocketed. It was also accompanied by another phenomenon, called gleefreshing, where the realtime dashboard for say a spacecraft in orbit, presidential elections, or vaccines going through clinical trials, verifying the results, and then laughing maniacally out of pleasure.

To engage in joyscrolling you need to find the suitable content. This can be something like the wholesome-memes subreddit, or the @livefrom-snacktime account on Insta, that contains an endless list of ridiculous things that little kids say. Taking the activity a step beyond, is to start threads in forums, posts in social media and groups in messaging services that encourages others to contribute towards a spiritually nourishing discussion, or share inspirational pieces of content. While you are at it, it is also a good idea to set up something like a #positive-conversation channel on Discord servers you administer.

OXIMETERS

While the entire team is continuously bombarded with buying advice, of late we started receiving a number of requests for suggesting the best and cheapest oximeter in the market. We had to find ourselves explaining that it is a product category that we do not test, at least not just yet. However, everyone and particularly their grandpas seem to have their heart set on getting one. Well most of the devices available on the market more or less have the same features and
