

Trend stories typically are stuffed with fancy new jargon and if that is what you are looking for, then switch to the Hot or Not section. While we can elaborate on terms such as “cold chain” the actual activity involved is along the lines of consistent long term tendencies of technology growth, such as digitisation, automation and an increased reliance on artificial intelligence. Remote working and contactless technologies got a major boost. Edutech and fintech services saw a rise too. Along with that, there was an increased reliance on cloud technologies, and changes in the associated security risks.

As things return to normal, these transformations are only expected to crystallise or accelerate further during the remainder of the pandemic and after. Here you will find real ways sans the fancy lingo, in which the situation is changing, and the new world that waits for us in 2021.
