

Facebook undersea display

Facebook & Google are planning an undersea cable to connect South East Asia to North America. <http://dgit.in/apr21-63>

Tech tax

The US could put tariffs of up to 25% on UK Exports as a response to UK tax on tech firms. <http://dgit.in/apr21-64>

It's the Lockdownversary

Celebrate it by baking bread, cyberloafing or making a wish board

Aditya Madanapalle | aditya@dgit.in

WORD OF THE YEAR

It is that time of the year, when the researchers maintaining dictionaries decide on the single word that preoccupied people over the last year, and at the same time defines and captures the crazy year that was. McMillan's dictionary went ahead and chose "Zoom" as its buzzword of the year, which is a very safe choice considering many of the trends that we saw last year including zombies, zoomullets, and zombombing. The Oxford English Dictionary could not settle on a single word that could capture the experience of 2020, and decided to write a whole report, identifying "lockdown" in UK, "shelter-in-place" in US, "circuit breaker" in Singapore, "MCO" (movement control order) in Malaysia and "ECQ" (enhanced community quarantine) in Phillipines. The Merriam Webster dictionary went for the safe choice of "coronavirus", while coming up with a top 10 list that included "defund", "malarky" and "irregardless", a word that has a personal history with the dictionary as Jamie Lee Curtis claimed on Twitter that the dictionary had just added the word in 2020, even though it had been added in 1934. For Dictionary.com, the word of the year was "pandemic", searches for which spiked after the World Health Organisation declared the pandemic in March last year. Collins dictionary chose "lockdown" noting