song deliver a goosebump moment for the MHA community. You can realize it's true beauty if you are closely following the anime from quite some time and can identify the hidden easters, which many anime intros are well-known for. The song furnishes a vividly presented message of high ambitions and one's determination to achieve sky high dreams no matter what! The song is just another thing responsible for making the sequel PLUS ULTRA!!!

GOTTA CATCH EM ALL! - POKEMON

Gotta catch 'em all! is the English slogan of the Pokémon franchise, including the English language Pokémon video games. The Japanese equivalent is Get Pokémon! which emphasises on one's ambition to catch all the Pokémon existing in the Pokémon world and become a Pokémon master.

This opening (rather it's hindi alternative) brings back all our memories from childhood. From learning all it's phrases by heart to trying our best to find Pokémon IRL, we all grew up. The Pokémon theme remains something still cherished by all the Pokémon fans worldwide even so many years after its release.

CRUEL ANGEL'S THESIS - NEON GENESIS EVANGELION

Neon Genesis Evangelion is an anime which will give you existential crisis everytime you watch it. To accompany this series was one of the most influential openings of all time - Cruel Angel's Thesis. Sung by the legendary J-Pop singer Yoko Takahashi, this song was an instant hit when the anime originally aired in 1995.

This song will take you through the journey of Shinji and his hatred towards his father and his big robots (the EVAs). In the music video, we see a glance of all the characters in the anime as well as some fight scenes. If you are a die hard fan of this series then you're sure to get goosebumps when the words "Zankoku na tenshi no you ni" hit your ears.

HIKARU NARA - YOUR LIE IN APRIL

Your Lie in April is a cruel anime. It's just downright cruel. It's characters do not deserve the fate that they meet. Let's not spoil anytime and talk about the opening - Hikaru Nara - a single by the Japanese band Goose House.

When you first start the anime and hear the opening, you'll not feel anything towards it aside from the fact that it has a catchy beat. Eventually, as you progress through the series, you will realise that each and every frame of the opening has some meaning behind it. Even the English translation to this one is pretty accurate to convey the feelings of the singer. All in all, this one opening will stick with you till the very end - even after you complete the anime.

RUNNING IN THE 90S - INITIAL D

Even if you don't belong to the anime community, we're sure that you have heard this catchy upbeat song at least somewhere. 'Running In The 90s' is a eurobeat song that plays in the Initial D - 3rd Stage, 5th Stage and the Final Stage. But why is it so popular? If you have seen the Initial D series, you'll realise that catchy eurobeat songs are no stranger to the series. You can hear a new song in every other episode. The thing that made this song popular was the memes. This song has been used as a template for millions of memes. Some were funny and some were just sh!tposts. But the main essence - the fast paced nature of the song, the synths, the vocals and the rhythm - they all add up to give you a rush of adrenaline everytime you hear it.

THE WORLD - DEATH NOTE

If Death Note was your first anime then The World - the first opening of this series would definitely be the first Opening that got you hooked. Sung by the Japanese band Nightmare - this opening features a glance at all the characters in the series while keeping Light in the center of it all. This upbeat JRock song by itself is a decent song. But combined with the visuals in the music video which have Light and L standing in front of each other staring intently at their enemy, a glimpse of all the Shinigamis and other things - the whole opening (music + video) is a full package in itself. 📺
