The new color scheme and icons in Windows 11

the box is better because it is system wide, and without bugs. That said, if the final build has the option to revert this look, we're pretty sure many people will take it. Heck, so many of us still try and theme our Windows 10 to look like Windows 7!

ICONS

Windows 11 features icons that can be quite different looking than the ones we are used to on Windows 10. Windows 10 has these skewed minimalist icons that follow a certain colour palette and that palette does not consist of bright colours and different shades of them. Instead, Windows 10 aims for a more subtler and minimalist approach towards its icons. Windows 11 icons are flat and have vivid bright colours that jump out at you.

This one is totally subjective. While many will like the bold new look of the icons, there are always going to be those who prefer the OS remain in the background instead of trying to scream "Look at me!". That said, there are memes already doing the rounds making fun of Windows 11 icons as being the flatland cousins of Windows 10...

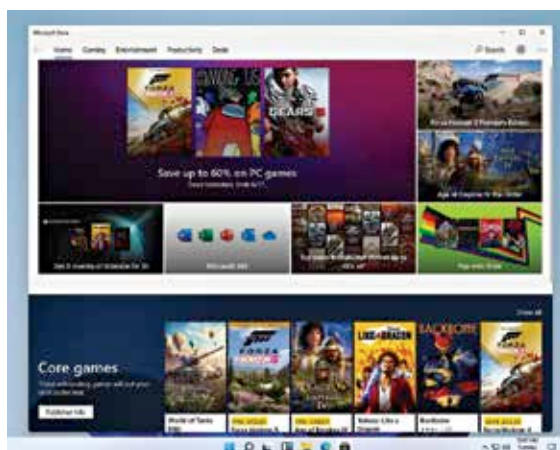

is a big advantage towards Windows 11 as you get a very immersive experience while using the operating system, because everything is fluid and snappy. You can check out the videos on the topic at the YouTube channels we have linked to at the end of this article to get a better idea of the look and feel. We will also be making videos of our own when the final version is out, which you can catch on our channel as well.

We're waiting for the public beta of Windows 11 before we start making videos about it and putting it through its paces in the form of tests. Most people will want to know how gaming and HDR perform on the new OS, and we cannot wait to tell you all about it. We will also be able to test and tell you about the new hardware requirements that come with Windows 11, so that you can keep those in mind in case you're thinking of upgrading your PC or laptop. ANIMATIONS

Windows 11 features smoother, fluid and better animations than Windows 10. While there's nothing wrong with Windows 10 animations, as such, Windows 11 just takes it up a notch or two. It features a lot of pop-in pop-out animations, slide animations and in general those animations feel more fluid than Windows 10. This
