

AI to predict events

Pentagon believes its precognitive AI can predict events 'days in advance'
<https://digit.in/aug21-63>

Floating wind farms

UK pushes floating wind farms in drive to meet climate targets.
<https://digit.in/aug21-64>

by combining elements of hip-hop, jazz, and electronica. The bittersweet nostalgia that Nujabes's music evokes remains a staple characteristic of lo-fi music today. Nujabes was a pivotal contributor to the soundtrack of the critically acclaimed anime series Samurai Champloo, which combines a mediaeval Japanese backdrop with modern allegories, particularly in terms of hip hop culture like graffiti and rapping. The lo-fi genre became intimately linked to the anime aesthetic and the nostalgia associated with it, following anime like Samurai Champloo and Cowboy Bebop.

J Dilla collaborated with A Tribe Called Quest, Erykah Badu, and The Pharcyde, among others. He made hip-hop that was more lo-fi in sound. His rhythms are laid-back and mellow, as opposed to Wu-Tang Clan's aggressive hip-hop. He had a knack for creating long, melodic loops mixed with breakbeats and voice samples. J Dilla's sounds were more relaxed or "human" without quantisation or beat correction. On a drum machine, quantisation guarantees that each note or beat is ideally on time — thus, if your drum pattern is a bit off, you may quantise it to make it accurate. Since any form of beat correction was turned off, the drumming was more relaxed. He was recognised for "humanising" the drum machine by switching off quantising the beats. He also had a unique method of sampling chords and other musical components to construct an entirely new composition from old songs. J Dilla will be regarded not only as one of the most influential catalysts for music.

To Listen:

- Nujabes feat. Shing02 - Luv
- J Dilla - Sunbeams

00S / CHILLWAVE AND VAPORWARE

Chillwave is a music subgenre that first appeared in the late 2000s. It roughly resembles 1980s electropop while delving into themes of memory and nostalgia. Chillwave became a name to characterise this more indie-focused synthwave cousin, a vintage sound with origins comparable to '80s electro-pop to synthwave but with a more trippy look than synthwave's polished neon gloss. Features that characterise Chillwave include psychedelic, lo-fi aesthetics, soothing vocals, slow tempo, and retro-esque synthesisers. Chillwave slowly wanes into vaporware and gradually into lo-fi.

Vaporware evoked nostalgia by mixing music from the 1980s and 1990s with jazz, lounge and elevator music to create a nostalgic atmosphere, almost redolent of a shopping mall. Vapourwave has a solid link to the popularity of LoFi hip-hop; many LoFi graphics evoke the same 90s aesthetics seen in Vapour-wave media. Despite being a genre developed solely on the Internet, Vapourwave generally uses stronger, brighter electronica and uses distinct 80s and 90s aesthetics. Whereas Vaporwave conjures up an idealised vision of the future from the 1980s, lo-fi conjures up a warm, nostalgic vibe from the past.

To Listen:

- MACINTOSH PLUS - リサフランク420 / 現代のコンピュー |
- HOME - Resonance

20S / MODERN DAY

Listening to lo-fi hip-hop on YouTube has grown increasingly popular and accessible. "Lofi" will bring up several live streams with anime-style thumbnails. Some of the most popular channels are Lofi Girl (Earlier Known as Chilled Cow), Chillhop Music, the bootleg boy and STEEZYASFUCK. In addition, each stream's title denotes a mood. Beats for chilling, resting, learning, and sleeping are usually separate streams. This further reinforces the fact that lo-fi hip-hop has less to do with genre and more to do with mood — with the atmosphere. Each channel's live streams run a loop-ing video with a calming visuals, featuring a swaying sakura tree or the iconic anime girl in headphones, writing in a notebook in a cosy room. This creates a relaxing atmosphere and has now become an essential part of lo-fi music.

The trope of the anime girl studying has been at the forefront of the lofi scene ever since it exploded on Youtube. Back in the day, Chilled Cow used Whisper of the Heart's Shizuku Tsukishima as the face of their streams. It soon went viral, and Studio Ghibli decided to take down the stream for copyright violations. ChilledCow called for artists to come up with an original character while also maintaining the Ghibli-esque aesthetic. Artist Santo Puppy replied to ChilledCow's request for a "student busy revising for her classes, with Miyazaki-esque graphics". He experimented with several poses, but ultimately went with an anime girl wearing headphones, studying at her desk, with La Croix-Rousse appear in the background. This new lo-fi girl character has been widely referenced in popular culture. The widespread popularity of the lo-fi girl prompted ChilledCow to change the name of the channel to Lo-Fi Girl. Today, the lo-fi girl has become synonymous with lo-fi music. The components of lo-fi tracks have grown in tandem with production methods, resulting in a genre that has become ingrained in the memories of a generation. Of course, none of these genres, preceding lo-fi, are inextricably related. They don't have an apparent evolutionary ancestry, but they all have features in common in lo-fi hip-hop. More genres emerge as you go further into the history of lo-fi hip-hop. It's difficult, if not impossible, to say for sure what the history of such a vast genre is. Despite the lack of a transparent or acceptable past, audiences can enjoy lo-fi inventiveness and subtlety. They can also just relax.

Tracks to Listen to:

- NO SLEEP