bang for my buck. I have to say Digit is simply awesome to the point it's really hard to find the "can be improved" bits.

The GOOD:

- 1) Articles are super fun to read, they are detailed and sometimes quite witty too.
- 2) The basic of a technology magazine are reviews which are to point and really UNBIASED, unlike youtube where we all know what is the current Indian youtube reviewers scene, getting honest reviews is hard to find.
- 3) The magazine has certain funny elements as well like the Digit Diary.
- 4) Digit is a pretty diverse magazine to be called just a tech magazine.
- 5) Every Month I especially look forward to Booman, I slip through the pages just for Booman.
- 6) Level up has been so helpful to me a lot of time.
- 7) I also love to read the snippets up top it really must be a lot of hard work collecting so many interesting topics every month.

The CAN BE IMPROVED:

- 1) See guys the typos I really don't mind and sometimes I really think they make for quite hilarious sentences and words like GRAPHICS CARS etc.
- 2) Along with comics guys could you also try and include SCI-FI NOVEL REVIEWS or any novel review.
- 3) I saw this amazing video online on how to make your own audiobooks using python you could write a DIY article on that !!.
- 4) Make an ANDROID & IOS app you guys with everything at one place news, subscription renewal or the online stuff you give for free to read. So just keep it up you guys, TO

Greetings to the geek-heads!

Hope you people are well wherever you are. I have been a fan of your compilation of tech information with deep insights and in-depth analysis in a bound copy which I receive every month and get right into digit-izing. Looking back I feel I've come a long way with the digit experience which I cherish all along, from the days in school library flipping through the magazine to getting awestruck by all the new unfolding tech. Now jumping straight into my ideas for this already amazing magazine:

- 1) Better DVD content please! Some quality open source software with some technical reading in PDF format would also be nice to have.
- 2) Can you review a device after 3-6 months of use like a second impression so we can know the aging of it?
- 3) A tweak in aesthetics of the magazine towards minimalistic design.
- 4) Pages are too glossy and often become unreadable below a light source. Do see if something can be done though I know it's a tight call.
- 5) Some kind of digit merch.
- 6) The website needs a website look rather than a blog.
- 7) I'm sure a lot of your readers are interested in programming. So a column of code or some tutorial on problem solving.

JULY 2021

What an awesome cover. It even looks better than actual Windows 11. Kudos to the person who designed and decided the colors.

On page 12, there is a typo in heading. First time saw in heading (Digital instead of digital).

Particularly good article by Dhriti over privacy concern in fitness apps. But do we have option in this online world to do much about privacy?

Finally I could understand what's NFT. Thank you for the detailed article.

1 suggestion I have is, to share the link of the code as on page 74 and 75 it would be hard for anyone to read code in small columns, Take the main logic and explain that would be good.

AUGUST 2021

Good cover story about R2R. I stand in favor of it as you gave a quite simple example where a phone wire is loose, and the company charge half the price to repair it, which is wrong.

Page 53 has some good and practical broken things from repair world.

Page 59 - Using the word pineapple as example is an innovative idea.

I think in all articles you should first explain the basic. Like after reading 2 full articles, I understood what's right to repair. Page 61 - I support your idea of giving score to companies that can help us taking an informed decision about the companies which support Right to Repair.

Hi team,

As a feedback, can you please consider bringing the Digit magazines in Magzter again. Most people find that app convenient to use where they refer magazines of other genre too.

Also, instead of CD, it will help to share the downloadable stuff's link. Nowadays, most people prefer internet for sharing things rather than CDs.

Dear editorial team

I have been a regular reader of Digit for the last two decades. I am 52 year old and working in a charity organisation working for the tribal community. I am handling the technology part of the organisation. My first spreadsheet application is
