

SEPTEMBER
2021
VOLUME 21
ISSUE 09

Battle of the bots

Fully autonomous weapons systems remove humans from the loop of the decision making process, when it comes to using lethal force against other humans. Already around the world, there are weaponised machines that can be operated remotely, and defence contractors are researching heavily into the use of artificial intelligence in future weaponised platforms. We have a close look at exactly what these machines are and what they are capable of.