

Activision to settle lawsuit

Activision Blizzard will pay $18M to settle a lawsuit by a US government agency for harassment. <https://digit.in/oct21-75>

Companies betting on new tech

Companies are betting on new tech to make the re-opening of offices safe. <https://digit.in/oct21-76> driving an old fashioned Trans-Am 2000 In a futuristic, high-tech universe. Still, JP's enthusiasm makes him one of the finest drivers in intergalactic racing competitions, securing Trans Am's place as one of the most iconic cars in pop culture.

DELOREAN DMC-12, BACK TO THE FUTURE

The DeLorean's futuristic appearance, mixed with a bit of cinematic magic, cemented the DeLorean's legendary reputation in pop culture.

PONTIAC AZTEK, BREAKING BAD

Walter White drove a Pontiac Aztek. The factory paint job is fading, and the factory alloy wheel is missing. Despite its plain and unattractive appearance, it has become an iconic figure in the series and pop culture.

BMW M3 GTR E46, NFS: MOST WANTED (2006)

The M3 GTR E46 from Need for Speed: Most Wanted is the only video game automobile that genuinely merits the moniker "classic." Part of this was due to the game's enormous popularity in racing arcades, but it was also due to the "cool factor" it brought to the table.

KANEDA'S MOTORCYCLE, AKIRA

Kaneda's futuristic motorbike is desired by everyone who sees it, thanks to its prominent appearance on the cover of Katsuhiro Otomo's classic film from 1988. Even though its exact make is unknown, it is adorned in trademarks and insignias that contribute to its mystique.

MYSTERY MACHINE, SCOOPY-DOO

Ringleader Fred Jones owns this colourful van with flower-power swagger, which serves as Mystery Inc.'s primary mode of transportation. Although no brand or model is given, the look is reminiscent of a 1960s panel van, quite literally a mystery machine.

SUBARU IMPREZA WRX, BABY DRIVER

Although Baby Driver is a new film, the vehicle is instantly recognisable. The hero of the fantastic opening sequence was a Subaru WRX painted red with black wheels, widely advertised leading up to the film's premiere.

VOLKSWAGEN BEETLE, HERBIE

It's difficult to think negatively about a VW Beetle. The bug enamours even those who are uninterested in automobiles. He has his thinking and can drive himself, and he is frequently a formidable competitor in car racing contests.

DODGE CHARGER 1970, FAST AND FURIOUS

This vehicle became famous because of the movie's climactic action sequence. As Vin Diesel's character approaches Paul Walker's character, who is driving a Supra, he slams on the gas, causing the Charger to execute a sick wheelstand and burn out all at once. 