Samsung The Frame 2021

Elegant design, punchy colours

Price
₹71,990

Samsung's The Frame has been one of the most unique TVs with the ability to use the TV literally as a picture frame on the wall when not in use. Today we have with us the 50-inch 2021 Frame from Samsung.

BUILD AND DESIGN

The Frame has simple black borders which can be customized with different coloured designs. The TV can be wall-mounted and that's where it looks best, but if you place it on a table-top, it has 2 slim feet as well. Then we have the One Connect Box which houses all the connectivity options and connects to the TV via a single cable that's almost invisible making the TV the centre-piece of your room.

DISPLAY AND PICTURE

The TV has QLED backlighting and does not come with any dimming zones. Using the Calman we got a sustained brightness of 350 nits and our ColorChecker analysis revealed an average delta error of 10.5 in the BT 2020 colour space in HDR. In real-world use, the TV produces punchy colours like other Samsung TVs. The Frame does not support Dolby Vision. It supports HDR 10 and 10+ along with HLG. While the lack of Dolby Vision is missed, the TV can produce good HDR content. We saw our standard slew of content on the TV like Our Planet, Altered Carbon, Jack Ryan and many more. The most interesting thing to note is the picture presets.

While you have the ability to switch from Standard to Movie, I'd recommend keeping the "Intelligent mode" on as it does a great job of judging the content. For HDR content, the intelligent mode brings about warm tones when needed and skin tones look natural. When watching animated content in SDR, the colours look vibrant. Even in movies like Spider-Man: Homecoming, the reds and blues on the suit are very well accentuated while the skin tones are natural.

GAMING

This is where it gets interesting. When you set up the PS5 and adjust the HDR brightness, it looks like the TV compensates for its lower brightness by letting you set the brightness of the console much higher than it can handle. This was evident in a game like Dirt 5 that looked burnt when we played it and we had to change the HDR settings to have an enjoyable experience.

AUDIO PERFORMANCE

Samsung's The Frame 2021 has 20W of sound output for the 43 and 50-inch variants. Clear is the best way to describe the sound from the TV. While you will miss the bangs and thuds of an action movie, dialogues are easily audible and background scores sound fine.

UI

Samsung's TVs run on the company's own Tizen UI. Pressing the home button brings up all the apps in a row at the bottom of the display and if you have an external device like a PS5, then that comes up in the content navigation.

REMOTE CONTROL

The remote has a minimal design and has a USB-C port at the bottom. You can also leave the remote control under a light and let it recharge as it has a small solar panel at the back. Coming to the buttons, the volume rocker and channel changer have a distinct click to them when used.

VERDICT

The 50-inch The Frame has very good picture quality, smooth and easy to navigate UI and can make the content pop. On the downside, the TV does not support Dolby Vision and has low peak brightness. But the positives outweigh the downsides and The Frame is definitely a TV to consider.
