

MOVIE

OLD

★★★★☆ | Directed and produced by the legendary M. Night Shyamalan, this movie had a lot of hopes riding on it when it was first released to the public. But it stirred up polarising opinions, with some liking it and some not so much. The movie even managed to break even in almost all movie rating sites like Metacritic, Rotten Tomatoes and IMDB with an average rating of 5.5 out of 10.

Old's premise is simple. It is a family vacation turned sour. Three families turn up on a private, secluded beach to have some relaxation time. The beach is scenic and it was all that they could ever ask for in a vacation. But little did they know, things started to go south as soon as they entered the beach. This beach isn't a regular beach by any means. Here, time passes at a faster rate as compared to the normal world.

Hence, your body ages abnormally quickly and funnily enough, it's only the body's cells that are aging faster than the normal rate. This means that spending a day on the beach will age you about 50 years more. What's more is that once you have entered the beach, you cannot escape for reasons we can't say to avoid spoilers. Now then, why did this movie get so many mixed reviews? Well, the answer is simple. After sitting through the whole movie, you will realise that everything that happened, everything that brought you at the edge of your seats was the situation and not the actors. Even the dialogue for the film was bland which added fuel to the fire. The best thing about the movie is its plot. The concept of time has been explored in a different way as compared to other movies which deal with time. Usually, time travel or anything related to that is the first thing that pops up into anyone's mind when they hear that a movie is related to "time" but Shyamalan decided to stir things up and explore a new aspect of the concept. The film had immense potential. It had a strong plot, a good director and a pretty convincing storyline for a movie related to time and hence it could've done so much better only if the actors didn't deliver a mediocre performance.

—Kshipra Jadav

TV SHOW

Inside Job

★★★★★ | Inside Job is a hidden gem that not many people can appreciate. One look at the trailer for the show and you will come to realise that this show is just like every other American animated TV show. Only those who took time to actually watch the show on Netflix can truly appreciate its beauty and humor. Produced by the creator of Gravity Falls – Alex Hirsh, this one had a lot of expectations riding on it and it fulfilled every single one of them.

The plot of the show is simple yet a bit complicated at the same time. The show aims to make fun of conspiracy theories and conspiracy theorists at the same time by proving that they are right. The conspiracy theories are indeed true but in a satirical manner. Cognito Inc. is a company which seems to be a plain old company at first but inside the main building, main operations get carried out where people basically control the world. Theories from the president being robot or the existence of shape-shifting amphibians living among us or the moon landing being fake and the most classic of them all – the earth being flat and many more are indeed true and being handled by select people inside the company. One such staff at Cognito Inc. is the protagonist of the show Reagan Ridley and her team who actively try to hide these truths from the world and keep the general public convinced that they are just conspiracies and not facts. Obviously this job comes with its own set of perks and responsibilities. Those responsibilities are what the show is centered around.

There's a very solid reason that this show is rated for adults only. The existence of adult humour with a mixture of some blood and gore here and there makes it a perfect binge for a Saturday night. There are a lot of pop culture references and the adult jokes are such that they won't strike you at first, but when they do, they'll hit you like a train. With a new conspiracy being covered in every episode and the adventures of Reagan, her team and her drunk father, we think that this show will keep you entertained till it's last running second.

—Kshipra Jadav